“The Great Moral Stake of the Moment”

Perhaps not since Abraham Lincoln's Second Inaugural has a head of state delivered a speech as searching as Vaclav Havel's New Year's Day address to Czechoslovakia. The new president challenged his compatriots to face their past collusion with Communist rule and their future responsibility for their own freedom. Excerpts:

For the past 40 years on this day you have heard my predecessors utter variations on the same theme, about how our country is prospering, how many more billion tons of steel we have produced, how happy we all are, how much we trust our government and what beautiful prospects lie ahead. I do not think you put me into this office so that I, too, should lie to you.

Our country is not prospering. The great creative and spiritual potential of our nation is not being used to its fullest. Whole sectors of industry are producing things in which no one is interested, while things we need are in short supply.

The state, which calls itself a state of the working people, is humiliating and exploiting the workers. Our outdated economy is squandering energy...A country which could once be proud of the standard of education of its people spends so little on education that today it ranks 72nd in the world. We have laid waste to our soil and the rivers and the forests our forefathers bequeathed us, and we have the worst environment in all of Europe today...

The worst thing is that we are living in a decayed moral environment. We have become morally ill, because we have become accustomed to saying one thing and thinking another. We have learned not to believe in anything, not to care about one another and only to look after ourselves. Notions such as love, friendship, compassion, humility and forgiveness have lost their depth and dimension, and for many of us they represent merely some kind of psychological idiosyncrasy, or appear as some kind of stray relic from times past, something rather comical in the era of computers and space rockets...

The previous regime, armed with its arrogant and intolerant ideology, denigrated man into a production force and nature into a production tool. In this way it attacked their very essence and the relationship between them. It made talented people who were capable of managing their own affairs...into cogs in some kind of monstrous, ramshackle, smelly machine whose purpose no one can understand. It can do nothing more than slowly but surely wear itself down, along with all the cogs in it.

When I talk about a decayed moral environment...I mean all of us, because all of us have become accustomed to the totalitarian system, accepted it as an inalterable fact and thereby kept it running. In other words, all of us are responsible, each to a different degree, for keeping the totalitarian machine running. None of us is merely a victim of it, because all of us helped to create it together.

Why do I mention this? It would be very unwise to see the sad legacy of the past 40 years as something alien, handed down to us by some distant relatives.

On the contrary, we must accept this legacy as something which we have brought upon ourselves. If we can accept this, then we will understand that it is up to all of us to do something about it. We cannot lay all the blame on those who ruled us before, not only because this would not be true but also because it could detract from the responsibility each of us now faces - the responsibility to act on our own initiative, freely, sensibly and quickly...

Throughout the world, people are surprised that the acquiescent, humiliated, skeptical Czechoslovak people who apparently no longer believed in anything suddenly managed to find the enormous strength in the space of a few weeks to shake off the totalitarian system in a completely decent and peaceful way. We ourselves are also surprised at this, and we ask where the young people, in particular, who have never known any other system, find the source of their aspirations for truth, freedom of thought, political imagination, civic courage and civic foresight. How is it that their parents, the generation which was considered lost, also joined in with them? How is it possible that so many immediately grasped what had to be done?...

Of course, for our freedom today we also had to pay a price. Many of our people died in prison in the '50s, many were executed, thousands of human lives were destroyed, hundreds of thousands of talented people were driven abroad....Those who resisted totalitarian government were persecuted, [as were] those who simply managed to remain true to their own principles and think freely. None of those who paid the price in one way or another for our freedom today should be forgotten...

Neither should we forget that other nations paid an ever higher price for their freedom today, and thus also paid indirectly for us, too. The rivers of blood which flowed in Hungary, Poland, Germany and recently in such a horrific way in Romania, as well as the sea of blood shed by the nations of the Soviet Union, should not be forgotten...it was these great sacrifices which wove the tragic backdrop for today's freedom or gradual liberation of the Soviet-bloc nations, and the backdrop of our newly charged freedom, too...

This, it seems to me, is the great moral stake of the present moment. It contains the hope that in the future we will no longer have to suffer the complex of those who are permanently indebted to someone else. Now it is up to us alone whether this hope comes to fruition, and whether our civic, nation and political self-confidence reawakens in a historically new way.

Excerpt from DATING YOUR MOM, by Ian Frazier

In today's fast-moving, transient, rootless society, where people meet and make love and part without ever really touching, the relationship every guy already has with his own mother is too valuable to ignore. Here is a grown, experienced, loving woman — one you do not have to go to a party or a singles bar to meet, one you do not have to go to great lengths to get to know. There are hundreds of times when you and your mother are thrown together naturally, without the tension that usually accompanies courtship — just the two of you, alone. All you need is a little presence of mind to take advantage of these situations. Say your mom is driving you downtown in the car to buy you a new pair of slacks. First, find a nice station on the car radio, one that she likes. Get into the pleasant lull of freeway driving — tires humming along the pavement, air-conditioner on max. Then turn to look at her across the front seat and say something like, "You know, you've really kept your shape, Mom, and don't think I haven't noticed." Or suppose she comes into your room to bring you some clean socks. Take her by the wrist, pull her close, and say, "Mom, you're the most fascinating woman I've ever met." Probably she'll tell you to cut out the foolishness, but I can guarantee you one thing: she will never tell your dad. Possibly she would find it hard to say, "Dear, Piper just made a pass at me," or possibly she is secretly flattered, but, whatever the reason, she will keep it to herself until the day comes when she is no longer ashamed to tell the world of your love.

Dating your mother seriously might seem difficult at first, but once you try it I'll bet you'll be surprised at how easy it is. Facing up to your intention is the main thing: you have to want it bad enough. One problem is that lots of people get hung up on feelings of guilt about their dad. They think, Oh, here's this kindly old guy who taught me how to hunt and whittle and dynamite fish — I can't let him go on into his twilight years alone. Well, there are two reasons you can dismiss those thoughts from your mind. First, every woman, I don't care who she is, prefers her son to her husband. That is a simple fact; ask any woman who has a son, and she'll admit it. And why shouldn't she prefer someone who is so much like herself, who represents nine months of special concern and love and intense physical closeness — someone whom she actually created? As more women begin to express the need to have something all their own in the world, more women are going to start being honest about this preference. When you and your mom begin going together, you will simply become part of a natural and inevitable historical trend.

Second, you must remember this about your dad: you have your mother, he has his! Let him go put the moves on his own mother and stop messing with yours. If his mother is dead or too old to be much fun anymore, that's not your fault, is it? It's not your fault that he didn't realize his mom for the woman she was, before it was too late. Probably he's going to try a lot of emotional blackmail on you just because you had a good idea and he never did. Don't buy it. Comfort yourself with the thought that your dad belongs to the last generation of guys who will let their moms slip away from them like that.

Once your dad is out of the picture — once he has taken up fly-tying, joined the Single Again Club, moved to Russia, whatever — and your mom has been wooed and won, if you're anything like me you're going to start having so much fun that the good times you had with your mother when you were little will seem tame by comparison. For a while, Mom and I went along living a contented, quiet life, just happy to be with each other. But after several months we started getting into some different things, like the big motorized stroller. The thrill I felt the first time Mom steered me down the street! On the tray, in addition to my Big Jim doll and the wire with the colored wooden beads, I have my desk blotter, my typewriter, an in-out basket, and my name plate. I get a lot of work done, plus I get a great chance to people-watch. Then there's my big, adult-sized highchair, where I sit in the evening as Mom and I watch the news and discuss current events, while I paddle in my food and throw my dishes on the floor. When Mom reaches to wipe off my chin and I take her hand, and we fall to the floor in a heap — me, Mom, highchair, and all — well, those are the best times, those are the very best times.

It is true that occasionally I find myself longing for even more — for things I know I cannot have, like the feel of a firm, strong, gentle hand at the small of my back lifting me out of bed into the air, or someone who could walk me around and burp me after I've watched all the bowl games and had about nine beers. Ideally, I would like a mom about nineteen or twenty feet tall, and although I considered for a while asking my mom to start working out with weights and drinking Nutrament, I finally figured, "Why put her through it?" After all, she is not only my woman, she is my best friend. I have to take her as she is, and the way she is is plenty good enough for me.

List what gets in your way of not living your values:

Excerpt from "Critical Path," by R. Buckminster Fuller

In considering theology and science I think it is important to note their differences regarding familiar and not-so-familiar cosmic concepts.

It is the very essence of my thinking that, for a principle to qualify as generalizable in science, there must be no known exceptions to its reliability. Exceptionless means eternal. Principles can be only eternal.

Mathematics are eternal. Principles are mathematically demonstrable—as manifest, for instance, in synergy. Principles are truly independent of any additional special case, time-size aspects of their manifestation. There are principles governing covarying rates of relative size-time interrelationships. That principle is manifest in $E = mc^2$, c^2 being the utterly unimpeded rate of growth of an omnidirectionally expanding light wave's surface as demonstrated in vacuo.

This also involves the mathematical principle that a system's linear dimension grows at a first-power rate, while its surface grows at a second-power rate and its volume at a third-power rate. A steel needle with an initial length of six feet and a diameter of two inches, having a "slenderness" (L/R) ratio of 36/1, is reduced to a needle three inches long with a diameter of .08333 of an inch. The six-foot needle sinks in the water. The three-inch needle floats on the water: its volume—ergo, its weight—has become so negligible that its surface relates only to the surface tension of the water, its weight being much less than can be supported by the atomic interattractions producing the molecular membrane of the water surface.

To demonstrate frequency in pure principle I observe painfully that I cannot put my finger through the plane of revolution of a swiftly rotating airplane propeller and withdraw it before it gets hit. Yet machine guns can be timed to fire bullets between successively revolving propeller blades. My muscle and brain cannot reflex and act that fast. I might get my finger through once but can't get it back in time. Operationally speaking, "solid" means very high frequency present in pure principle. I can see through my glasses because light moving through only one way at 186,000 m.p.s. has ample time to avoid the frequency of interference events occurring locally in pure principle.

There are no solids. There are no things. There are only interfering and noninterfering patterns operative in pure principle, and principles are eternal. Principles never contradict principles. Principles can interaccommodate one another only in noninterfering frequency ways. Principles can interaugment one another if frequency is synchronizable.

Acknowledging the mathematically elegant intellectual integrity of eternally regenerative Universe is one way of identifying God.

Everything the brain deals with relates to high-frequency thingness. Mind, and mind alone, deals with understanding with interrelationships existing only between and not in any one principle, considered only by itself. Principles themselves are often subsets of interrelationships existing only between specific principles.

God may also be identified as the synergy of the interbehavioral relationships of all the principles unpredicted by the behaviors or characteristics of any of the principles considered only separately.

The synergetic integral of the totality of all principles is God, whose sumtotal behavior in pure principle is beyond our comprehension and is utterly mysterious to us, because as humans—in pure principle—we do not and never will know all the principles.

Apparently the integrity of the synergy of all synergies of all principles is continually testing its own comprehensive adequacy to accommodate all challenges in pure principle to the maintenance in pure principle of the principle of nonsimultaneous, only-overlappingly-affected, complex unity's eternal regeneration.

Realization that the foregoing may be true tends to inform humans that the introduction into Universe of humans, in pure principle, with minds operating in pure principle, capable of apprehending and objectively employing in pure principle some of the eternal principles, was courageously undertaken by God to discover whether the principle of the eternally regenerative integrity of Universe can endure inviolate despite the dichotomy of knowledge brought about by introduction into the cosmic system of humans and their minds with access to and employment of some—but not all—of the eternal principles. This was an experiment in pure principle to test the adequacy of the synergy of synergies of principle to cope with the sometimes perverse, egotistical, selfish, and deceitful initiatives inherent in the concept of humans in pure principle without access to the wisdom accruing synergetically only to knowledge of all the principles—ergo, possibly capable of impairing the integrity of eternal regeneration. That may be what the integrity of God needs to know and needs to know by experimental evidence.

DISCOVERY AND CHANGE

That is what I am thinking about in “Ever Re-thinking the Lord’s Prayer.” It is also what I am thinking about in volume 2 of Synergetics. I think it is probably an intuitive awareness of the possible verity—of parts or of all—of the foregoing that makes the theologist disregard the scientist’s brain-induced requirement of a cosmic beginning and ending.

All scientists have brains. Brains always and only coordinate the special case information progressively apprehended in pure principle by the separate senses operating in pure mathematical-frequency principle. Brain then sorts out the information to describe and identify special whole-system characteristics, storing them in the memory bank as system concepts for single or multiple recall for principle-seeking consideration and reconsideration as system integrities by searching and ever-reassessing mind.

Only minds have the capability to discover principles. Once in a very great while scientists’ minds discover principles and put them to rigorous physical test before accepting them as principle. More often theologists or others discover principles but do not subject them to the rigorous physical-special-case testing before accepting and employing them as working-assumption principles.

Principles are eternal. Special case interactions of principles are temporal and brain-apprehensible because in pure principle we have time, which is simply the principle of potentially different relative frequencies and not of beginnings and endings.

Logistics for Discovery and Change

The logistics of the program (dinners, preparation of lunch and breaks, some shopping, and housekeeping) is a shared responsibility of the participants. All participants will be assigned to a logistics team. Each team will have a team leader.

Here is how it works:

On the first day, the first team arrives at 4:30 p.m. to set up for dinner and also to set up the program space. It is very important that everyone on the logistics BE ON TIME. Normally, you will need to arrive one hour before the program begins.

Then, each day's duties include arriving early to:

- Clean up the space in the morning (bathrooms, main room, whole house)
- Restock supplies (toilet paper, plates, cups, etc)
- Get the space ready for each break and clean up afterwards
- Check with the instructors for any requests they may have.
- Make coffee and prepare breakfast.

The team is responsible for having fresh coffee and lemon water available all day. They will also provide fruit for snacks and prepare lunch each day.

On Sunday night of each session everyone in the program will do a complete house cleaning. The Logistics Supervisor will assign specific jobs to each team.

If you are required to buy anything for the program in the way of supplies, always be sure to ask what is allowed in the budget for supplies and keep your receipt. Give your receipts to the logistics supervisor at the program after the purchase and you will be reimbursed on the last day of the session. Reimbursements will not be given without a receipt.

Dinner for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday will be handled on a rotating basis and assigned by the logistics supervisor. When your turn comes up, you will provide dinner at your expense for all program participants and invited guests. This includes soup or salad, bread, and a main dish. Salad dressings and other condiments, plates, napkins, and drinks will be provided. The logistics supervisor will be calling participants who are on the schedule for logistics teams or dinner.

The logistics supervisor is available to answer any questions about your duties. Once you have agreed to the schedule, if you have a schedule conflict on your logistics day, it is your responsibility to replace yourself and let the logistics supervisor know who is taking your place. A roster will be provided to you.

The concept of service is demonstrated through doing logistics and is an integral part of the teaching process. It will be discussed more specifically at the first session of Discovery and Change.

This is your emotional history from conception/birth to the present. For example, the time your dad left/died, what you did, the decisions you made; how others around you handled it. The time you were a star in the school play; the decisions you made; how you and others handled it. Make it as comprehensive as you can for the “real” story to be told. Share your experience of how you felt with some emphasis on the details of the event. Interview relatives, teachers, friends, and whomever else you can to get the information. Stir those dormant memories. Explore deeply, have fun, remember!

[illegible]

On Responsibility

Choose partners. Join another pair to form a group of 4.

The purpose of the exercise is to learn how to

- 1) share responsibly,
- 2) listen responsibly,
- 3) give support.

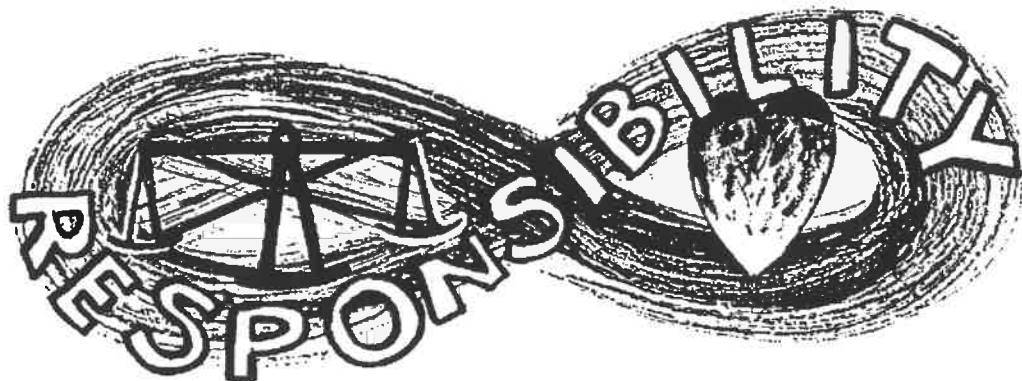

Share with your partner how you are not responsible in your relationship, your job, your family.

Then share what actions you could take to be responsible.

Your partner shares with you his/her experience of what you are saying and your level of responsibility.

The other pair in your group supports your partner to be equal with you.

Complete all roles and then move on to another group.

Discovery and Change (Personal Responsibility Training)

Instructor's Notes:

DISCOVERY AND CHANGE is an educational curriculum in the teachings of PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY. It is not therapy or a substitute for therapy. The instructor's role is to teach the information introduced in the Choices Weekend on a deeper, more personal level. The participants are responsible for their own learning and how they choose to use the information.

The instructor sets the context of personal responsibility by being with the truth of their own and each participant's experience while at the same time teaching the content of each session. They do not process anyone unless that particular experience will demonstrate a point in the teaching.

As the material is taught, and participants begin their journey, they will be in and out of their old belief systems or illusions regularly. When a participant is in their illusion, the instructor stays with the content they share until they are about to have a monster fight, or the participant is clearly incongruent.

The instructor then STOPS the interaction and uses the content to teach about what is true in the situation, ALWAYS using humor and without judgement. If there are any judgements, the instructor demonstrates a way to include not judging the judgements.

It is not the instructor's responsibility to see that the participants use the information in a positive, supportive way, but rather to see that the truth about their choice is clear. This sets the context of unconditional love as well by demonstrating acceptance that everyone is responsible for their own life. This is a crucial part of the transformation process.

The intention is to allow the participants to be 100% responsible for the learning they receive from the program.

Session One:

Owning Your Personal History

Session One - Owning Your Personal History

First Evening: (6:00 PM to 9:00 PM)

p Welcome everyone to the Discovery and Change.

Introduce yourself. Share your connection to ED and the Choices work, and begin modeling intimacy and personal responsibility by talking about yourself and your intention in this program.

p Introduce the Logistics Person. Explain that their role is to support you during the program as well as to be responsible for the overall effectiveness of the logistics.

p Ask everyone to introduce themselves and share their reasons for doing this program. Ask them to do their best to be intimate as they share about themselves. (Video) p Let them know how important it is to fully experience what they are doing in every moment--like right now. This is the key to the program.

Do the "wisdom is the result of experience" poster.

p Hand out notebooks. Explain that the sessions will each have a specific focus. Refer to the Table of Contents page that lists the curriculum.

This first session is on Owning your Personal History. Let them know that they will be getting handouts throughout the program. Encourage them to bring in articles, poems, etc. to share with everyone. Ask them to keep a scrapbook of their journey.

pCollect a Personal Discovery Form from each participant. (Have extras on hand in case someone did not bring one and ask them to return it to you by tomorrow morning.)

pTalk about participants sharing the logistics responsibilities in the program--or doing some kind of community service in groups during the program if the is in a hotel. Ask people what their experience of service is and what reactions they have to doing it. Talk about the value of those reactions and of being able to serve others, work in groups and keep agreements no matter how they feel.

pAsk them if they agree to be on time. Tell them that the program will begin on time.

7 Break (30 minutes)

p Tell them they will be meeting in groups each month and that these groups will change.

Have them look around and see who they want in their group and who they would rather die than spend time with.

Who do they have judgements about? Tell them to savor those judgements while they last.

p Have them choose their groups. (5 minutes)

p Have people meet in their groups and share their personal history. Ask them to share any secrets, to let people in their groups know who they are right now, not who they think they should be or who they plan to be. Remind them that the key to the program is to experience what is true now. (30 minutes)

p Sharing.

p Let the group know that the formal instruction ends each day at dinner except for Thursday night. They will meet with their groups Friday and Saturday evenings with specific assignments in order to integrate the day's material. And the program will end at 5:00 on Sunday. Let them know that you will talk on Sunday about scheduling, family day and retreats. And that you will be taking a walk (or something like that) together on Sunday and every session.

p End the evening with "In a Simple Way" or "The Rose"

From Drawing + change (without graphics)

Day Two : (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM)

p Start day with the context of the entire program and allow sharing from participants.

p Use the sharing during the next two days to review the basics (with posters) of:

☐ Reaction: the cover-up for feelings that were not acceptable in our families.

Review the clues for being in reaction: 1) not in the present, 2) body feels tight, 3) things seem to be coming at you instead of you being the source, 4) when you think that what you feel is about or because of someone else, 5) your mind won't shut up, 6) you want to prove a point, 7) you are judging, 8) you feel compelled

☐ Feelings not experienced get stuck and control you

☐ Projection: thinking that someone else is doing something to you or thinking/feeling something that you are doing/thinking/feeling yourself and don't want to know it.

☐ Intimacy - telling someone how you feel or think or what you experience about you without blaming them.

☐ Head Vs Heart: Your mind is a catalogue of your past experiences. It interprets things according to that past. Your heart tells you what is true now and does not judge whether or not you are reacting.

☐ Personal Responsibility: choosing how you respond to something despite the programming from your past. Seeing yourself as the source of your experience and results without judgement.

☐ Unconditional Love: means accepting ALL of you including your judgements.

(While doing the review, use material shared from participants as much as possible. Make sure you demonstrate including sharing your own stuck places.)

p Ask people their specific personal goals and intention for the program in regard to: their relationships, career, family, body and sex, and where they want to be 9 months from now. And also how committed they are to doing whatever is necessary to get the result they want and what they will do to demonstrate the commitment. (Put this sharing on their individual videos. Give them 30 minutes to prepare.)

p Ask participants to give each other feedback about their experience. Remind them that peer support will be a major element in the program and that support means telling someone the truth of your experience. Demonstrate this and share differences between feelings and experience.

(Videoing people stating their goals and giving them feedback should take the entire day. Remember to use the content presented by the participants to teach and review the concepts taught in the Weekend.)

p If there is time, have people share what their vision was from their Weekend.

p Have people meet in their groups during the evening and share with each other what they need to experience right now in their lives and what their resistance is to experiencing it.

p End day with "Can't Buy Me Love" or "Sounds of Silence"

Day Three (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM)

p Start day with sharing.

p Have people share the present truth about the state of their relationships, their jobs, their family, their body and in general their emotional, mental and spiritual health right now.

p Use participants' sharing to teach the concepts of:

- the relationship between Love and Money Both are energy and how we are about giving and receiving one will likely be true for the other.
- Support vs. Taking Control Of --the difference is in the intention. One is for connection and the other is to ease our own discomfort.
- Any of the concepts from the Weekend not reviewed yesterday or their questions.

p Ask them to notice: Every time they want to change their experience or appear different to others than what is true in the moment; or any time they leave the present moment for either the past or the future.

9 Lunch

pAsk people to share truth:

- about sex: truth about you & sex
 - ☐ favorite part of sex (what people usually call “sex” is not making love - but when they are obsessed with sex they are looking for something they haven’t found yet. If people fight this, ask them to look at why they are fighting)
 - ☐ how many women really like giving blow jobs?
 - ☐ are you okay with what has happened in your sexual life?
 - ☐ do you still believe that sex is dirty?

p With children - if you are ok with your feelings you will know what to say when they act “sexual”. If you are not ok with your feelings you will repress your children.

pWhat does it mean when you think you are attracted - you like the way someone looks pAn attraction comes from inside out. Something inside of you is pulled to the inside of the other person.

- do you have an agreement with yourself to be monogamous?

pSexuality doesn't have anything to do with another person. We put it on another person - but not true.

pHave to be ok to leave a relationship before you can have it work. If there's no choice, there's no passion.

pSometimes the physical feelings and the reality are different. The feelings are always strong. Doesn't mean that's what is true.

pStay with what's true and say everything.

pFeel the feelings without doing anything to relieve them.

p Exercise: have them meet in their groups and share their favorite story about their childhood. (e.g. abandoned, princess, abused.) Have them present it. Then have them share the truth that the story protected them from experiencing. (one & a half hours)

p After the exercise, have people come back in the large group and share what they discovered.

Teach about illusion.

p Sharing

p Ask them to meet in their groups after dinner to prepare a short autobiography that they will present individually on Sunday.

p Remind them that you will be taking a walk together (or whatever) tomorrow morning at 9:00. Let them know where. Also ask them to bring their calendars tomorrow so that you can schedule the next few sessions.

p End with "I Want to Live"

Day 2 Session 2

Discovery and Change

Same as PR - no graphs

Day Two Session Two (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM)

p Open with Sharing.

p Ask people:

- what is the purpose of "right and wrong"?
- Is there such a thing? Do you want to live your life according to what is "right" or "wrong"?

p Teach that:

- people need limits on their behavior for safety. How do you set limits for your behavior if there is no "right" or "wrong"?
- children especially need limits so they can grow.

p Have them talk about what limits were set on their behavior (not feelings) as a child and what were the effects of those limits or lack of limits.

What limits do they set on their children's behavior and what are the results?

9 Lunch

p Let them know the rest of the day's agenda:

- 1) the effects of not being responsible -
 - loss of personal power and indecisiveness
- 2) and
 - All fights are with yourself.
 - Your relationship with yourself determines your relationship with the world and everyone in it.

- clarity and unconditional love are the results of being personally responsible.

p Discuss the components of personal responsibility:

- taking care of yourself, including your feelings.
- being equal
- experiencing and telling the truth (no illusions)
Ask yourself - what are the results of my behavior?
Does this serve me or not?
- being compassionate with yourself when you judge
- being congruent - having your behavior, your intention, and your vision match.

p Exercise:

- 1) Find a partner.
- 2) Choose an area of your life that you feel you cannot be responsible for. Why not?
- 3) As a small child, talk to your parent or other appropriate person about this. (Your partner will play that person.)
- 4) See what they tell you in return.
- 5) Together, reach a resolution where there is no blame.
- 6) From that place of no blame, let yourself know why you chose your parents.

p Teach that the essence of personal responsibility is to create your life exactly the way you want it to be.

p Ask: What gets in the way of being responsible?
Make sure the answer boils down to:

Fear of Freedom

- false guilt - being afraid of being caught or punished by someone for being "bad." This is a smoke screen to stop growth.

- self-hatred or self-punishment. This takes the place of change. It also ensures that the behavior you are judging will continue. It is an addictive behavior. It is a way not to feel.

p Ask who is bringing someone to Family Day.
Find out what the participant's relationship is like with whoever they are bringing. This relationship is what the group will be supporting. You will not be doing any work with the guests.
Ask them what support they would like with the family member they are bringing. They may just want to share this experience. Find out which it is. Let them know that you will always take the guest's side in any issue.

p Evening exercise : (hand out instructions)

On Responsibility

Choose partners.- Join another pair to form a group of 4.

The purpose of the exercise is to learn how to

- 1) share responsibly,
- 2) listen responsibly
- 3) give support.

Share with your partner how you are not responsible in your relationship, your job, your family.

Then share what actions you could take to be responsible.

Your partner shares with you his/her experience of what you are saying and your level of responsibility.

The other pair in your group supports your partner to be equal with you.

Complete all roles and then move on to another group.

p End evening with "Imagine"

*Session 2Discovery and Change
- same as PR
- no graphicsDay Three (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM)

Family Day

p Welcome any family members, make them feel at home. Ask them where they're from, what they do, etc. Tell them what Family day is for: a time for the participant to share what they are doing here with their family. Explain (if they are the participant's parents) that our experience is that all parents love their children unconditionally. Ask the parent, "is there anything that could do that would make you not love them?" Teach how most of us think we need to be a certain way with our family so we'll be loved. This results in most of us not seeing our parents or other family members very clearly. This time in the program is for the participants to see their families more clearly and to let go of some of the assumptions they've made about them. Tell some funny stories about how "pig headed" the participants can be and how much their parents/ families want them. Invite family members to participate if they wish, to ask any questions and to make themselves at home.

p Sharing and review of last night's exercise.

p Continue building the context of safety -

- The purpose of Discovery And Change is to discover how we operate. To do that we need to be willing to have our experience.
- Making mistakes creates opportunities for learning when the behavior is corrected.

- When the behavior from the old patterns is changed, the old system begins to disintegrate and we experience a void - which is the birth of creation. Consistent new behavior creates a new system.

p Work with the family members and participants.

9 Lunch

p Remaining agenda:

- 1) Practice speaking responsibly now.*
- 2) Demonstrate your old system today in everything you do.*
- 3) You will demonstrate your new system of behavior based on personal responsibility tomorrow.

* 1 and 2 together create a paradox p Teach about Integrity - being whole, unimpaired, with no part left out.

- the advantages of living in integrity lead to happiness, success and peace

- the disadvantages to not living in integrity lead to broken agreements, operating with partial senses, and distance from yourself.

p Exercise : Share everything about yourself you don't want to talk about. Be responsible and demonstrate your old system.

p Teach that there is no separation. We are all connected. Feelings and thoughts are energy. That energy passes through us. So what we don't experience, others will.

p Remind people that you will be taking a walk together (or some other exercise) in the morning. Let them know where to meet.

p Tell them that they will be watching the movie "Nuts" with Barbara Streisand together that evening.

p Ask guests if they have anything they would like to say. Thank them for coming.

p End day with "It's About Time"

*Session 2Day Four (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM)

p Open with sharing. Include support to participants who had family members there.

p Discuss the purpose of support.

- How you interpret what you experience is based on your old system. It is impossible to change systems by yourself. You must have the support of people who know your intended change and will be equal with you. Taking support despite the demands of your old system.

p Exercise:

- 1) Choose an issue that is current in your life.
- 2) Share the issue as you would in your old system.
- 3) Share the issue demonstrating personal responsibility with support from the group.

9 Lunch

p Break into pairs and continue the exercise.
(1 and 1/2 hours)

p Discussion of exercise.

- The difference in communication between the old way and the new:
 - Responsible communication focuses on you
 - You are in control of what you say.
- The temptation to be irresponsible increases as you become more responsible.

p What do you need to handle from personal responsibility in your relationship with your parents?

p Assignments: (have them write in workbooks)

- Notice your level of personal responsibility in your relationships and at work.
- Read "Illusions" by Richard Bach
- Have a responsible conversation with your parents. If they are dead, choose a surrogate that brings up the same issues.

p Talk about the retreat that you will do during session four - Vision. It is two days longer and will be residential. They are responsible for their own transportation and expenses including lodging. Come to a decision with the group about where it will be. There will be no family day at the retreat.

p End session with "The Living Years"

Discovery and Change

Session Three

Integrating the Primary Family

Session Three: Integrating the Primary Family

First Evening (6:00 PM - 9:00 PM)

p Gossip and sharing. The purpose for the evening session is for everyone to connect, and to set the stage for the focus for this session - integrating the primary family.

p Find out how they did with their assignments. What results did they get?

p If they did not do them - why not? Stay with each person, clarifying their reasons until there is a clear answer. (e.g. "I didn't want to", "I was not willing to feel what I would feel if I did ...")

This has to be done without judgement. Put on flip chart.

p Find out why the people that did do the assignments did them. Put on same flip chart.

p Ask them what percentage of why they do things is still for their parent's approval or disapproval. Go around the room. Now ask the same question and ask them to respond from their heart.

p Do a review about how our patterns of behavior are set.

Do the "Bliss to Now" poster for sensations > feelings > reactions. Then remind them that when reactions are reinforced, often enough they become the patterns of behavior and beliefs about what is so. We lose track of the original sensations and operate separate from ourselves. We are in our heads, mainly in illusion and on automatic pilot.

p This session is about integrating your family system and choosing your own patterns of how you want to live and be from the context of personal responsibility.

p They can expect to feel very uncomfortable at times because the glue that holds those patterns in place is our love for and desire to be loved by our families. This is usually experienced through a psychic connection from our childhood.

p Have them close their eyes for a moment and get in touch with the child (that they were) that loved their parents no matter what. Let that child know that what you plan to do here this weekend will let you be more real with your family, even though it may feel otherwise at times.

p Sharing.

p Ask them to bring their calendars on Sunday so you can schedule the rest of the sessions.

p End evening with "Lovin' Arms"

Day Two (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM)p Sharing.

p Ask people to share what it was like in their families when they were growing up. What behaviors were rewarded and what was the reward? What feelings were allowed and which were not? Give lots of space.

p Review the difference between feelings and reactions when someone has demonstrated one or the other during the sharing.

p In particular, point out when someone is in their illusion about what happened in their childhood. Offer them other ways to look at the situation they are describing. (For example, if they are describing a parent that did not love them, you might suggest that perhaps the parent felt inadequate or incapable of loving and therefore was not demonstrative.) This is a time to teach about how our childhood family thoughts become imbedded and shape our present experience.

If they fight with you, use it as an opportunity to teach about how we are all sure we are right about what happened in our families. Talk about the consequences of being right - you get to be right.

p Teach what happens when you let in new information-- chaos occurs. All the feelings that were protected by being right, numb, angry, etc. come flooding in. Your system gets perturbed. If the upset is strong enough, stays long enough, and is experienced as coming from inside, true lasting change is possible.

9 Lunch

p Mom/ Dad Game :

Have them get in their groups and become their same sex parent. (e.g. men become their fathers and women become their mothers.) Give out name tags and have them put on the tag with the name of that parent. Give out instruction sheet:

Mom and Dad Game

Become your same sex parent at 20 years old and then the age they are now (even if they are dead) talking about Love, Sex, Marriage, Children, Money, Work, Power, Intimacy and Success. (30 minutes)

Then switch and become your opposite sex parent. Be that parent talking about the same issues as before.

(30 minutes)

How are you like your Mother?

How are you like your Father?

Hand out new name tags when they switch and have them write that parent's name on the tag.

Ask them to fill out the part about how they are like each parent during the break.

p Have them share what about them is like their parents. And what about their parents they would rather die than be like. Then, have the group support each other about what they are like to be with. Make sure that they understand support before they do this exercise.

p Teach about projection: thinking that someone else (parents, lovers, children, co-workers) is doing to you what you are doing to yourself. Or thinking that someone else is feeling what you are feeling or thinking what you are thinking. Now, even if it is true that others are doing what you think they are doing, what does that have to do with your response?

Most of what we think is true about our parents is a projection.

p Ask them to meet in their groups after dinner to support each other in taking back all the projections they have on their parents. Sometimes, people have to look at their relationships with their children or lovers in order to get to their parents.

p End the day with "Father and Son"

Day Three (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM) Family Day

p Welcome any family members. Give them the same information about the purpose of Family Day as found in Session Two.

p Sharing. Ask people what they found out about their projections.

p Create space for participants with family members there to do any sharing with them. Support the participant to share intimately, clearly, and responsibly. The ideal is for the participant to take all projections off the family member and to share about their own behavior and its affects on them and their relationship with that person. Demonstrate so that it is clear to both the participant and the family members how to do it.

p Ask the group what they think are the effects of projection. Write on flip chart.

Make sure the results include: isolation, feeling like a victim, self-hate, righteousness, shame.

p Ask the group why people resist seeing their projections. Why do they?

What are the clues to projection? (blame, judgement, being obsessed with someone else's behavior or motivation, feeling victimized, feeling controlled)

9 Lunch

p Projection Game: Have people get in their groups. Each person chooses a "difficult family member" in their own lives. First talk about that family member to the rest of the group. (30 minutes)

Then they become that "difficult family member" (with name tags), and speak to the rest of the group about how they think and feel in the relationship. (30 minutes)

p Sharing

p Teach about what happens when you take back projections. You experience truths about yourself that make you feel crazy. All the parts of yourself that you judge become conscious and are right in your face.

p The key to successfully taking back your projections is letting go of the fantasy of approval. Approval is a creation of the mind that we give immense power over us. Its power comes from our belief that if we didn't act in certain ways, our families would not love us. So we altered ourselves according to a perceived outside standard, and we changed or hid whatever doesn't match that standard. The experience of vulnerability and intimacy cuts through projection and eliminates hiding. This hiding and pretense is the clothing of projection.

p Some of us on the other hand, chose to go for disapproval. It may have been our only connection with our family and works the same way as approval does. We are still focused on the outside to determine the acceptability of our behavior.

p In either case we continue to look to the outside to define whether or not we are lovable or acceptable.

Letting go of the outside means that we allow our true experience of ourselves and the world around us and show others what is true about us no matter how we feel about it. When we do this, we create an inside self that speaks to us that we can depend on for the rest of our life.

p Ask the group to spend the rest of the time noticing what they do or have done in the program that is for approval or disapproval.

Give space for anyone to talk about that.

p Let the group know that they will be watching "Dead Poet's Society" that evening. And that you will be taking a walk (or whatever) together at 9:00 AM at

They will also be asked to demonstrate having integrated their primary family on Sunday.

p Ask the family members if they have anything they would like to say..... Thank them for coming.

p End day with "Memories" from Cats

Day Four (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM)

After walk:

p Sharing

p During the morning, teach again about how and when patterns are set:

The basic patterns of sensation>feeling>reactions are set at age 0 - 3; age 3 - 11 is when the behaviors are wired in to support the patterns and the beliefs are established; age 11 - 20 is when the behaviors get cemented in.

p Teach the way to change patterns: In order to change a pattern, you must choose the way you want to be, and do the behaviors that create that way of being. And keep to that course of action simply because you chose it; despite the feelings, thoughts and resistance of your old patterns. Make your word the law of your universe.

p Sharing. See if anyone had a reaction to "Dating Your Mom." If so what were they?

p Our society has a strong taboo against incest. We are not suggesting incest to anyone, but it is important for them to know that breaking their patterns will seem as outrageous at times as dating their mom because the taboos in their families against certain behaviors are as strong as the one about incest.

p Demonstration:

Ask the group to spend the rest of the day taking turns presenting their true experience of themselves in regard to their childhood and families. Have them include what current behaviors continue their beliefs and patterns from their childhood.

p Assignments for next session: (Have them write in their notebooks.)

- Read “The Kin of Atta are Waiting for You”
- In your notebook, write the following scenario:

You are in a room with your parents and it is the LAST TIME you will ever talk to them. (If they are dead now, give yourself this final opportunity to speak with them.) And, they will ever talk to you. Have a conversation about what is really meaningful to all of you.

- If after doing the previous assignment, you discover some unfinished business with a family member, please take care of it from a context of personal responsibility.

p Remind them that the next session is a retreat. Let them know where it will be and give them directions on how to get there and that there is no Family Day next time.

p Schedule the rest of the sessions. Remember that Session Six is also a retreat.

p End session with “The Living Years”

Session Four:

Vision and Power

Missing page 53

“in love.” Discuss differences of being in love and falling in love.

p End evening with “Changes Coming On”

- Ask questions - get into life, relationships, etc.
- How do you maintain a relationship?
- How do you live in paradox/contradiction?
- What can you do when someone you love breaks an agreement and won't deal with it, etc.? How do you deal with your own feelings?

p How to deal with fear and uncomfortable feelings:

- When you have strong anxiety do the connected breathing exercise. (Inhale slowly for as long as you can, counting each second, and then exhale slowly for as long as you can also counting each second. Repeat continuously for about 10 minutes.)
- Loneliness comes from hiding who you are, even from yourself. Stop hiding and loneliness goes away.
- Upset over mistakes - see them as essential. No learning happens without mistakes. Experience the feelings without doing anything to remove them from your experience.

p Discussion on teaching of values - Parent to child. Allow them to explore their own childhood and how they learned what was valuable and if they still believe it.

p To live your own vision will require behaviors different from those you were taught growing up.

p Tell them that we will be discussing purpose tomorrow. Ask them to spend the evening remembering and knowing what is true about themselves. Ask them to ask themselves to have a dream about their purpose and to remember it.

p End evening with “ Sweet Surrender”

Day Three (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM) Friday

p Today's purpose is to identify issues, clarify purpose, and define the components of vision.

p Review the information about vision being the picture of your purpose brought to life. Ask what their purpose is and whether they are connected to that purpose by knowing or if it is a belief. Teach the difference between knowing and belief. This may be taught over and over again.

p What does it take to stay true to your vision?

- Commitment - to be strong enough to withstand your addictions, old history, obsessions.
- A desire for Freedom - to be your true self, even if that desire is not felt or even thought.
- Staying out of reaction, or as soon as you are in reaction, you immediately choose to stop whatever you are doing and take a breath and find out what is really true.

p Have them share: "What's really true about Me?" with rest of group including everyone. No form to this - however, if they are in their heads, let them know. Put a time limit if needed.

9 Lunch

p Introduce Purpose - your basic purpose is why you were born - it is your soul's adventure here.

p Vision is that purpose brought to life - a picture of what would be true if you lived your purpose.

p Vision quest will start immediately after instructions and purpose meditation.

p Vision Quest context:

- Just expect love to happen tonight
- Eat a light dinner and only if hungry
- Be within calling distance of house or hotel
- The idea is to be with yourself and be into yourself
- The more extreme you break your patterns of sleep, and food, and exercise, (within the context of safety), the more the courting of vision
- You can call on your spiritual guides
- Have true intention to receive information from your soul - take whatever you get, don't reject or interpret any information
- Silence
- Honor your experience - recognize it, don't dodge it
- Ask with all your heart and soul to be allowed inside yourself to know what your life needs to be like: what do you want to do with the rest of your life?
- Listen with the heart of a child

p Purpose Meditation Play "Kitaro Ki"

Close your eyes and do some connected breathing. Just see a picture of infinity, an elongated figure 8. Relax your body, uncross your legs and float back in time. Just roll back in time.

Go back to a time when you realized that you were a real human, that you were there - a conscious being. Maybe you were 4 years old, maybe 5, 6, 7, 8 years old. If you haven't gotten in touch with that child yet, raise your hands. Create that child. Tell that part of yourself that is hiding, "be okay with that child." The rest of you be with that child. Let that child take you to a place where they felt the safest; where they felt themselves.

Now, that child knows that he/she is here to accomplish, to do, to be something. They are here because they have a job to do here, a mission. They chose this time to do a mission.

Let them tell you what they are here to do. It can be in words, a touch, a feeling. Let them tell you what they came here to accomplish.

Anyone not have anything told to them? Allow the child to show why you are here. Ask the question: "What is my purpose?"

How many got an answer you don't understand? If you do have an answer, enjoy and stay with your child. Those of you who didn't get an answer, ask that child if they trust you? Those of you that got a "no", are you willing to really commit to listening to what the child has to say? For those of you that didn't get a purpose, stay with that child until you do.

p Vision Quest (18 - 24 hours)

9 light dinner and snacks available all night and morning

Day Four Starts after lunch (1:00 PM - 5:00 PM)

p Group Share - Vision Quest debrief.

- Work with all input, whether vision or purpose complete or not
- Tell people to let the vision happen naturally
- And to talk about the truth of their experience
- The experience of truth creates space for healing
- Address fear - what is there to be afraid of really?

p Teach about receiving, really letting someone in. Whether or not you receive is very powerful:

- Our thoughts and actions affect the universe
- Receiving is an extraordinary gift to give
- When you receive negativity from another person without fighting or agreeing - healing happens:
 - It frees you from the past -
 - It allows the giver of negativity to see the results of their behavior -
 - Truly experiencing the results of negative behavior causes that behavior to cease.

p Teach about Universal Principles. There are truths that exist without exceptions. Ask the group to say what those truths are for them.

Handout excerpt from "Critical Path" by Buckminster Fuller. Read together. Comments? Ask who understood? Who didn't? Who understood with their hearts but not their heads? Ask them to read it over again alone tonight and see if there is any connection that occurs to them with their purpose.

p Support people to get the clearest possible sense of purpose.

- What would their purpose give to the world?
- What end does their purpose serve?

p End day with “What One Man Can Do”

missy p. 65

- Stay true to your inner knowing.

p Teach about what happens when change occurs:

- It won't feel the way you thought it would.
- It won't look, smell, taste the way you thought.
- Expect darkness and chaos. Welcome it.
- Don't do anything for relief.
- No self-help books for the next month.

p Assignments for next session:

- Read "The Nature of Personal Reality - a Seth Book" by Jane Roberts
- Bring in a poem that demonstrates adult relationships.

p As a group agree on the location for the retreat in Session Six - Sex, Bodies and Physical Integration.

p End the session with "Take Your Passion, Make it Happen" from Flashdance (Or, if the mood is quiet choose music that matches that mood.)

Session Five:

Creating Adult Relationships

Session Five - Creating Adult Relationships

Instructor's note: For the rest of Discovery And Change the participants should self-discover all the information. Ask questions that they have to search inside in order to respond to. Be sure to always address the participants as equals, assuming that they are totally responsible for what and how they are presenting themselves. We know how uncomfortable and difficult this can be. Be sure to get support from corporate offices if you need it.

First Evening (6:00 PM - 9:00 PM)

Discuss the Seth Book and have them pass around their journals and scrapbooks.

How has their vision served them over this month. What have been some of the problems, etc.?

p General sharing and connecting. The focus of this session is on creating and maintaining adult relationships.

p What does it mean to be an adult? Have them discuss.

p What is a relationship?

p What constitutes an adult relationship?

p As they bring up these points, put up on flip chart:

- Equal = having the same value and responsibility

- Not controlling. Control = trying to change someone (including yourself) to ease your own discomfort
- No taking care of. Taking care of = trying to control someone's behavior under the guise of helping or being helpless
- Intimate - sharing yourself at the deepest level, no blaming or hiding
- Responsible - choosing the context of your relationship and acting that way no matter what p After they are clear about what constitutes an adult relationship, have them share their poems that were their assignment from last session.

p End evening with “Let Me Sleep on It” by Meatloaf.

Day Two (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM)

p Open with sharing.

p Ask who experiences themselves having adult relationships? With their lovers? Family? Co-workers? Bosses? Friends? Children?

p If not, what is missing? What illusion do you have to let go of to have an adult relationship? Have the group support each other about this.

p Adult Relationship Exercise - Part I:

- 1) Choose groups for this session.
- 2) Now pick a relationship in your life that is not equal that you desire to be equal.
- 3) Go inside and imagine what it would be like to be adult in that relationship (10 minutes)
- 4) Tell your group members what relationship you are dealing with and what is currently going on in it.
- 5) With your group, model (role play) what an adult relationship would be like with that person. Support each other to be equal. (1 hour)

9 Lunch (Continue exercise through lunch.)

p Sharing about exercise.

p Ask people to demonstrate adult relationships in all of their communication for rest of session.

p Review the model for Change. (handout) p Have them give examples from their relationships of each stage of the model. Let them know that they will be doing "schiz - skits" on Sunday. These are demonstrations of themselves in relationship from both sides of the model: their old way and the new adult way.

p Ask them to meet in their groups tonight and share everything about their relationships and to bring each other up to date so that there still are no secrets.

p End with " Two Faces" by Bruce Springsteen

Day Three (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM)
Family Day

p Welcome family members. Give them the same information about the purpose of Family Day as found in Session Two.

p Sharing. Let them know that today's focus will be on intimacy as a part of adult relationships. Review our definition of intimacy for family members: into-me-see.

p Ask people to commit to being intimate throughout the day. Have someone demonstrate intimacy.

p See if anyone has anything intimate they want to say to anyone. Or anyone not in the room.

p Work with participants and family.

9 Lunch (Have them make any phone calls they need to about being intimate with someone not here.)

p Sharing, if needed.

p Adult Relationship Exercise Part II:

In your groups, talk about the relationship you were dealing with on Friday. Share how you are responsible and how you are not responsible in that relationship. All members to demonstrate intimacy, vulnerability, and responsibility.

Invite family members to support their participant in game.
(1 and 1/2 hours)

p Debrief the game.

p Invite family members to share anything.

p Thank them for coming.

p Let people know the assignment or movie for the evening.

p Remind the group that you will be taking a walk together tomorrow at 9:00. Let them know where.

p End the day with "Don't Close Your Eyes Tonight"

Session Six:

Sex, Bodies and Physical Integration

Session Six: Sex, Bodies and Physical Integration A Retreat

First Evening (6:00 PM - 9:00 PM)

p Introduction to session. Reconnect, include everyone. Discuss Bernie Siegle's book and how they did in their assignment to be attracted to everyone.

p Breaking down stereotypes.

- Imagine being totally attracted to each other and not being hooked on any pictures or history.
- What are your feelings about sex?
- What is your vision of yourself sexually?
- How many people think their sexual desire is more or less than it should be? Which?
- When do people like sex? (i.e. time preference)
- What do people call penises? What effect do those names have? (neg/pos)
- What do you call vaginas? What effect? (neg/pos)
- What names do people have for the act of "making love"? What effect do those names have? (neg/pos)
- Is sex as good physically as you desire?
- What are your attitudes toward sex?

p End with "I Don't Like To Sleep Alone"

Day Two (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM)

p Sharing

p Share who is attracted to who. Who would you like to have sex with and why? (make it light) p What is attraction about?

p Questions:

- How many women cry after orgasm? Men?
- How old were people when lost virginity?
- How many never had oral sex?
- Who is still promiscuous?
- Who has sex with opposite sex? Same sex?
- Are there things that feel good/bad? What? (If you are really connected -you automatically do what feels good.)
- Do you make love in order to feel connected?
- Who makes love when they don't want to?
- Why?
- What is more important: your joy or beliefs?

p Ask people to commit to only making love when they want to. Be serious about this.

9 Lunch

p What is sex really about? Why do people want sex?
How many people think it stems from something physical?

p When we were children we were “polymorphously perverse.” This means that everything felt erotic and sensual.

p As we grew up we were conditioned to experience only some areas as erotic.

- And the areas that were forbidden were more exciting.
- The genital areas became where sexual energy collects. (Instructors note - for this session, make sure you have read, studied or practiced about tantric sex - or another esoteric practice that demonstrates where true sexuality comes from. Read Rajneesh, etc.)

p Most parents did not massage, touch or kiss us, except on the cheek, past a certain age, and for some people not at all. Why? What belief did that create?

p Do you love every part of your body. And allow others to love your body as it is. (This is an assignment that participants need to commit to even if it takes the rest of the program.) One way to ask them to do it is:

Take off all your clothes and look in a mirror. As each judgement about your body appears, follow it with a positive thought. Continue this process until there are no more negative thoughts.

p Sex comes from a need to merge-connect-oneness.

- orgasm is the act of "coming home"
- You experience God. The individual ego dies.

- Sex is one way you can explore the soul.
 - one of the fastest tools to get to enlightenment
 - laughter, when making love, is nectar of gods
- Tantric sexuality (need to define here)--when kundalini rises--through spinal cord--through all chakras--ends in illuminating third eye. When both partners experience kundalini -enlightenment!

p Preparation for evening assignment:

- Give up all pictures on how it's supposed to be.
- What is attraction - It is the experience of the groin projected onto others. It's about something that is unresolved, something we are looking to complete. Be compassionate with yourself.
- Choose your groups for this session.
- In your groups, share your sexual autobiographies. Include all your sexuality issues; don't let anything go by.

p End with “I'm on Fire” by Bruce Springsteen

Day Three (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM)

p Group share from assignment.

- Discuss content. How you were in group is how you are in relationship (e.g. hog time, hold back).

p Discuss the power of words in speaking. When you speak you are creating/manifesting.

p Discuss judgements: you are drawn to what you judge and will always leave yourself. If you judge anything, you become part of that judgement.

- Do you act the way you "should be" vs. how you are? This can create sexual problems - i.e. premature ejaculation, frigidity, impotence.

9 Lunch

p Talk about shifting patterns: a behavior and the result of the behavior are put together in time - both create the pattern.

- In order to shift a pattern, timing is critical. For rewiring to occur:
 - you need to activate your will
 - you need to choose a new behavior in that moment of the "either/or"--you replace the patterned behavior with one that matches your vision.

- the new belief system you design will be imprinted with the shifts in behavior p Ask yourself: "Does what I do create the results I want? Does it bring higher thoughts?" "Does it bring me joy?" Decide how you are going to be.

p Share the most important thing you discovered about yourself sexually so far this session.

p Name what you consider the most powerful sexual issue you want to heal. Go deep.

p Evening assignment: with your group's support, understand who/how you are sexually, and the truth about you and your body. Create two visions: your true vision of who you want to be sexually; and how you want your body to look.

p End with "Almost Paradise"

Day Four (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM)

p Sharing about bodies and sex.

p Your body is your past. It is the result of your beliefs, patterning and history--how it looks, how it feels, whether it is healthy, how supple it is, how much pleasure it affords you is all a result of your beliefs and history.

p Do a piece using the Louise Hay book "Heal Your Body" to demonstrate the beliefs behind participants' physical stuff. Make it interesting, but not too long. Let them look up all their ailments during dinner.

p Let them know that they need to wear their bathing suits tomorrow because they will be talking about their bodies, and sharing their body autobiographies; what they have done with them and what they have learned about their beliefs from looking at them.

p Commitment = how change happens:

- Change due to outside stimulation DOESN'T LAST
 - read excerpt from "Black Butterfly" pg.149 - 153. (From beginning of chapter 10 to end of first paragraph on page 153.)
- Commit based on what's INSIDE.
 - e.g. Do you feel beautiful inside? Live the way a beautiful person lives and your body will reflect that.

- What are the qualities of a beautiful woman (or man) in a committed relationship?
- Allowing yourself to stay stuck in an old pattern erodes self-love; getting unstuck (creating a new pattern) gives space for more self-love.

When self-love is real, it becomes the pathway to love another. Without self-love, the love you feel for others is a projection.

- Commit because you have decided to - not because you are "ready", you will never be "ready."

9 Lunch (They eat with groups and continue discussion.)

p Physical integration. You chose yourself to be the way you are. Choose something new.

- Our bodies are our history manifested
- Feelings are mostly reactions to our history
- Experiment with new behaviors and see what coincides with your commitment - come from creation.
- Love every part of your body and allow others to love it just the way it is.

p Explain how physical integration relates to clarity of expression:

- Aspects of the physical, spiritual and emotional are centered and manifest in the body.

- The body is the instrument, the recorder of experience.
 - When you allow your experience, wisdom is disseminated throughout your cells. You get the information through your body as it becomes physically integrated.
 - You have greater clarity when you get your information from your experience rather than your interpretations.

- p Your body is the home for your soul. Take a long walk and be with yourself, not anyone else. Let yourself experience life through your body. (2 hours or until dinner)

- p Evening assignments:
 - During dinner, notice every interpretation, every judgement you have. Don't take them seriously, just be a "fair witness" to them and let them go.
 - After dinner, in your groups, share about your body any way you want to. Go as far as you need to go to let the group know you.
 - Later tonight, alone, do your own body autobiography (how your body has served you - how it's hurt, felt good, etc.)

- Wear your bathing suit tomorrow morning.

p End with “You Are So Beautiful” by Joe Cocker

Day Five (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM)

p Share your body autobiography with the group. Do it in just a bathing suit.

9 Lunch

p Continue body autobiographies if not finished.

p Talk about mother/son/daughter and father-daughter-son relationships:

- When parents aren't adult with their children (i.e. flirt with them, be needy around them) it creates a sexualized relationship.
- This is not confronted in our culture except when the feelings are acted out dramatically--there is no acceptable outlet.
- If we (or our parents) are repulsed by our (sexual) feelings/experience, we act them out. (incest, staying little with our mates, physical abuse)
- This projection onto our children gets acted out in the same format that any of our negative unconscious projections occur.

p Final sharing, closing, getting ready for integrity.

p Assignments:

- Sex - Only make love when you both truly want to.

During lovemaking, share everything no matter what (all thoughts/feelings). Stop if you need to.

- Bodies - Notice what you do with your body when you feel uncomfortable in your body (i.e. eat, sleep) Notice what is automatic--it is an opportunity for reprogramming.
- Make a list of every place you are out of integrity (hand out integrity check list). Bring with you to next session.
 - integrity is important in order to have a clear path to your vision
- Check your intention before you speak.

p End with “Under African Skies” by Paul Simon

Session Seven:

Personal Integrity

Session Seven - Personal Integrity

First Evening (6:00 PM - 9:00 PM)

Go over the assignments

p Spend the first evening reviewing sessions on responsibility and vision. Make sure they understand the context of these teachings. Connect.

p Have them decide as a group (meeting in small groups) to what level personal responsibility and integrity are necessary for living the life they chose on their vision quest. Have them be very concise and clear about what they do not want to be in integrity about. This part is very important. It sets the tone for experiencing the results of choices and mandates accountability.

p The instructor's role is to facilitate.

p End evening with "I Am an Island" by Simon and Garfunkle

What is your financial condition? Do you owe any money for which you do not have an agreed-upon plan to pay back? Does anyone owe you any money that does not have an agreed-upon plan?

Since the last session on bodies and sex, do you have a physical program for your fitness? What is it? How do you feel about your body now?

How is your sex life? Please explain.

Do you have any health problems not being dealt with? Or, any chronic physical conditions not being treated?

Do you have material possessions that are not supportive to your vision and your health? What are they?

p Direct them to take turns answering each question. As each participant gives his or her answers, the other two members of the group will be the "integrity patrol."

p The purpose of this exercise is only to discover what the truth is. We do not want to do anything about it. This process should take the entire day.

p The instructor's role is to facilitate the groups. Move around, be a catalyst. Only offer support when the group is stuck. It is not up to you to tell people to change. It is totally up to them to decide how to live their lives.

p The rest of the time is spent going over each question with each group. The participants decide how to handle each item that is not working for them.

p Have them continue the game in the evening until they are all satisfied.

p End with "I Shall be Released"

Day Three (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM)

Family Day

p Welcome any family members. Give them the information about the purpose of Family Day found in Session Two. Let them know that the focus of this session is integrity.

p General Sharing

p Teach about integrity and how it relates to conflict. (When you are not in integrity, you will create conflicts with those around you for the purpose of healing the out of integrity part of you. However, you will most likely project that conflict onto the person you are having the fight with and a lot of times they have the same issue you do and are doing the same thing.)

p Do any work with family members--wherever is appropriate.

p Have each participant demonstrate with the group the largest conflict they are having presently. Include all possible futures they can muster: what will happen if the fight continues and what will happen if it ends?

p Have the group discuss each fight as to how it relates to their integrity.

p Make sure they are being responsible for themselves. You just point out what you see as a “fair witness”. This is the next to the last session. They need, both individually and as a group, to be self-sustaining after the program ends. Take the entire day for this process.

p Ask family members if they have anything they would like to share. Thank them for coming.

p Have participants meet in different groups this evening. Tell them to make sure they are in a group with the people they are least intimate with. Have them complete any relationships in their lives that are out of integrity using their group members as surrogates.

p Remind them that you will be taking a walk tomorrow morning at 9:00 AM. Let them know where.

p End with “Cautious Man” by Bruce Springsteen

Day Four (10:00 AM - 5:00 PM)

After walk:

p Sharing. Today's purpose is to wrap up any area that is not in integrity.

p The Big Picture is that your level of integrity will determine your level of success to achieve your vision.

p The only reason we are out of integrity is that we are in a fight. Fights are always internal.

p Have them meet in new groups to deal with their internal fights by putting them out and choosing what they are going to do about them. And to support each other by not taking any part of each other's internal fights. (2 hrs.)

p During lunch have them plan a 5 minute demonstration of integrity.

9 Lunch

p Do demonstrations. Again, let the group be responsible for the feedback. You function as a fair witness about the group's integrity and responsibility.

p Final wrap-up and sharing.

p Let them know that the last session is to demonstrate personal responsibility about what they have learned; and they will demonstrate their mastery of the process of change, over and over.

p Tell them to prepare a demonstration of their entire work in the program to do during Session 8.

p Graduation will be Sunday.

Assignments:

- Prepare a multi-dimensional demonstration of their work in the entire program.
- Handle whatever is left with their integrity, or not, but to make a conscious choice about it.

p End with “All this Joy” - John Denver
