

Chapter 1

The Blue Pearl

Once a photograph of the Earth, taken from the outside, is available . . . a new idea as powerful as any in history will let loose.

Sir Fred Hoyle, 1948

What is home? To a man visiting a neighbor across the road, home is his house, his rose bushes, his backyard. To the peasant bringing goods to the city, it is his village. To the traveler abroad, it is his country. These are common human experiences. At one time or another, we each have called our town, state, or nation "home." Yet there is a greater home that only recently has come into our awareness, even though it has been ours all along: planet Earth.

As the first astronauts traveled out into space and the Earth receded into the distance, national boundaries began to lose their significance. These space pioneers no longer found themselves identifying with a particular country, class, or race but with humanity and the planet as a whole. Standing on the lunar surface, the astronauts saw what no human being had ever seen before: the great sphere that is Earth, four times as big and five times as bright as the moon itself.

To Edgar Mitchell, the sixth man to stand on the moon, this was a deeply moving experience, and he felt a strong connection to the planet. "It was a beautiful, harmonious, peaceful-looking planet, blue with white clouds, and one that gave you a deep sense . . . of home, of being, of identity. It is what I prefer to call instant global consciousness."

Mitchell observed that everyone who has been to the moon has had similar experiences. "Each man comes back with a feeling that he is no longer an American citizen—he is a planetary citizen."

Russell Schweickart, another astronaut, similarly felt a profound change in his relationship to the planet.

You realize that on that small spot, that little blue and white thing, is everything that means anything to you—all of history and music and poetry and art and death and birth and love, tears, joy, games—all of it on that little spot out there. . . . You recognize that you are a piece of this total life. . . . And when you come back there is a difference in that world now. There is a difference in that relationship between you and that planet and you and all those other forms of life on that planet, because you've had that kind of experience.

But the astronauts were not the only ones to have experienced this profound change of perspective. The photographs of our planet brought back from space triggered similar deep reactions in many Earth-bound men and women, feelings of awe and connectedness.

The profound impact of this Earth view has resulted in this picture being used in almost every sphere of human activity. It adorns the walls of offices and living rooms; it is a greeting card, a T-shirt, and a bumper sticker. Ecological movements and planetary organizations incorporate it in their logos, as do educational institutions and business corporations. At one time or another it has been used to advertise just about everything from cars, washing machines, and shoes, to book clubs, banks, and insurance companies. Yet in spite of all this exposure, the picture still strikes a very deep chord, and none of its magnificence has been lost.

It is not entirely coincidental that this photograph achieved its widespread appeal at the same time that many people were becoming increasingly concerned about the relationship between humanity and the planet, and our need to live in harmony with each other and with our environment. The picture has become a spiritual symbol for our times. It stands for the growing awareness that we and the planet are all part of a single system, that we can no longer divorce ourselves from the whole.

So the most valuable spinoff from the moon expeditions may have been, not in the fields of science, economics, politics, or the military, but in the field of consciousness. Getting to the moon allowed humanity for the first time to look upon this blue pearl that has been our home for millions of years and to see it as a whole. As Edgar Mitchell pointed out, "The payoff from Apollo may be inestimably richer than anyone anticipated."

The Living Earth

The view of Earth from space brought with it yet another insight: the possibility that the planet as a whole could be a living being. We Earthlings might be likened to fleas who spend their whole lives on an elephant, unaware of what it really is. They chart its terrain—skin, hairs, and bumps—study its chemistry, plot its temperature changes, and classify the other animals that share its world, arriving at a reasonable perception of where they live. Then one day a few of the fleas take a huge leap and look at the elephant from a distance of a hundred feet. Suddenly it dawns: "The whole thing is alive!" This is the truly awesome realization brought about by the trip to the moon. The whole planet appears to be alive—not just teeming with life but an organism in its own right.

If the idea of the Earth as a living being is initially difficult to accept, it may be due partly to our assumptions about what sort of things can and cannot be organisms. We accept a vast range of systems as living organisms, from bacteria to blue whales, but when it comes to the whole planet we might find this concept a bit difficult to grasp. Yet until the development of the microscope less than four hundred years ago, few people realized that there are living organisms within us and around us, so small that they cannot be seen with the naked eye. Today we are viewing life from the other direction, through the "macroscope" of the Earth view, and we are beginning to surmise that something as vast as our planet could also be a living organism.

This hypothesis is all the more difficult to accept because the living Earth is not an organism we can observe ordinarily outside ourselves; it is an organism of which we are an intimate part. Only when we step into space can we begin to see it as a separate being. Stuck like fleas on an elephant, we have not, until recently, had the chance to see the planet as a whole. Would a cell in our own bodies, seeing only its neighboring cells for a short period, ever guess that the whole body is a living being in its own right?

To better understand the planet as a living system, we need to go beyond the time scales of human life to the planet's own time scale, vastly greater than our own. Looked at in this way, the rhythm of day and night might be the pulse of the planet, one full cycle for every hundred thousand human heartbeats. Speeding up time appropriately, we would see the atmosphere and ocean currents swirling round the planet, circulating nutrients and carrying away waste products, much as the blood circulates nutrients and carries away waste in our own bodies.

Speeding it up a hundred million more times, we would see the vast continents sliding around, bumping into each other, pushing up great mountain chains where they collided. Fine, threadlike rivers would swing first one way then another, developing huge, meandering loops as they accommodated themselves to the changes in the land. Giant forests and grasslands would move across the continents, sometimes thrusting limbs into new fertile lands and at other times withdrawing as climate and soil changed.

If we could look inside, we would see an enormous churning current of liquid rock flowing back and forth between the center of the planet and the thin crust, sometimes oozing through volcanic pores to supply the minerals essential for life.

Had we senses able to detect charged particles, we would see the planet bathing not only in the light and heat of the sun but also in a solar wind of ions streaming from the sun. This wind, flowing round the Earth, would be shaped by her magnetic field into a huge, pulsating aura streaming off into space behind her for millions of miles. Changes in the Earth's fluctuating magnetic state would be visible as ripples and colors in this vast cometlike aura, and the Earth herself would be but a small blue-green sphere at the head of this vast energy field.

Thus if we look at the planet in terms of its own time scales, we seem to see a level of complex activity similar to that found in a living system. Such similarities, however, do not constitute any form of proof. The question we have to ask is whether scientists could accept the planet as a single organism in the same way they accept bacteria and whales? Could the Earth actually "be" a living organism?

This no longer seems so farfetched. On the contrary, an increasingly popular scientific hypothesis suggests that the most satisfactory way of understanding the planet's chemistry, ecology, and biology is to view the planet as a single living system.

The Gaia Hypothesis

One of the major proponents of the theory that the planet behaves like a living system is British chemist and inventor Dr. James Lovelock. His ideas, which have fundamentally altered many people's perception of the planet, were another fortuitous spinoff from the space race.

In the early 1960s Lovelock served as consultant to a team at the California Institute of Technology working on plans for the investigation of life on Mars. One problem they faced in looking for Martian life-forms was not knowing exactly what they were looking for. Other life-forms might be based on completely different chemistries—on silicon rather than carbon, for instance—and might not reveal themselves to tests based on Earthly life.

Lovelock theorized that however strange the chemistry and life-form might be, there would be one very general characteristic: any life-form would take in, process, and cast out matter and energy, and this would have detectable effects upon its physical surroundings. On a planet devoid of life, the chemical constituents of its atmosphere, oceans, and soil, through their interactions over millions of years, would settle into equilibrium; the proportions of the various constituents could be predicted roughly by the laws of physical chemistry. If, however, life were present, then whatever chemical processes it was based on almost certainly would leave the environment in a state recognizably different from that predicted by physical chemistry alone.

As a very simple example of this principle, consider a jar containing a mixture of sugar and water. Physical chemistry predicts that the sugar will dissolve until a given concentration is reached. If life in the form of yeast cells were added and left to grow, however, the resulting mix would be very different: there would be a lower concentration of sugar than predicted and much higher levels of alcohol and other organic products. We would determine, then, whether there was (or had been) life in the jar by measuring the sugar and alcohol concentrations.

The beauty of Lovelock's approach to life detection is that one need not visit another planet to know whether or not life is there. The basic chemistry of the atmosphere can be deduced from Earth-bound examination of the infrared, light, and radio waves coming from the planet. In the 1960s enough was known about the Martian atmosphere to suggest that it was very close to the state of chemical equilibrium; it showed no signs of the exotic chemistry characteristic of the presence of life. So, Lovelock concluded it was extremely unlikely that there was life on Mars.

Applying a similar approach to the atmosphere, oceans, and soil of our own planet, Lovelock found that the chemical constituents were far removed from equilibrium. To the casual observer it might seem that he had merely shown that there was, after all, life on Earth. But Lovelock began to see far greater significance in these disequilibria.

First, the concentration of gases in the Earth's atmosphere differs by factors of millions from the levels predicted by physical chemistry. The predicted level of oxygen in the air, for example, would be virtually zero, yet the actual concentration is about 21 percent. This is puzzling because oxygen is a highly reactive gas, combining readily with many other chemical elements; it should therefore be rapidly absorbed. Second, and even more puzzling, the actual composition of the atmosphere has remained at a level that is optimal for the continuance of life.

After pondering many such unlikely characteristics, Lovelock came to "the only feasible explanation": the atmosphere is being manipulated on a day-to-day basis by the many living processes on Earth. The entire range of living matter on Earth, from viruses to whales, from algae to oaks, plus the air, the oceans, and the land surface all appear to be part of a giant system able to regulate the temperature and the composition of the air, sea, and soil so as to ensure the survival of life. This concept Lovelock termed the "Gaia Hypothesis" in honor of the ancient Greek "Earth Mother," Gaia (or Ge). In this context Gaia signifies the entire biosphere—everything living on the planet—plus the atmosphere, the oceans, and the soil.

In maintaining the optimal conditions for life, Gaia manifests a characteristic that all living systems have in common: homeostasis. Derived from the Greek for "to keep the same," the term was coined by Claude Bernard, a nineteenth-century French physiologist, who stated that "all the vital mechanisms, varied as they are, have only one object: that of preserving constant the conditions of life."

An example of homeostasis is the human body's maintenance of a temperature of about 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit, the ideal temperature for the majority of the body's metabolic processes. Although the external temperature may vary by scores of degrees, our internal temperature seldom varies by more than a degree or two, the body cooling itself through sweating and warming itself through physical activity and shivering. The regulation of the number of white blood cells, and the control of the acidity, salt content, and delicate chemical balance of the blood are homeostatic processes as well. These and many others together maintain the best internal environment for the continuance of our body's life processes. Such processes are found not only in the human body and in all living systems but also within Gaia herself.

Gaia appears to maintain planetary homeostasis in a variety of ways, monitoring and modifying many key components in the atmosphere, oceans, and soil. The data that Lovelock amassed in support of this contention is fascinating, and the interested reader should take a look at Lovelock's book Gaia: A New Look at Life on Earth. In summary, some of the indications of Gaia's homeostatic mechanisms are:

The steadiness of the Earth's surface temperature: Although life is found to exist between the extremes of 20 and 220 degrees Fahrenheit, the optimal range is between 60 and 100 degrees Fahrenheit. The average temperature of most of the Earth's surface appears to have stayed within this range for hundreds of millions of years despite drastic changes in atmospheric composition and a large increase in the heat received from the sun. If at any time in the Earth's history the overall temperature had gone beyond these limits, life, as we know it, would have been extinguished.

The regulation of the amount of salt in the oceans: At present the oceans contain about 3.4 percent salt, and geological evidence shows that this figure has remained relatively constant, despite the fact that salt is being washed in continually by the rivers. If the salt concentration had ever risen as high as 4 percent, life in the sea would have evolved very differently. If it had exceeded 6 percent, even for a few minutes, life in the oceans immediately would have come to an end, for at this level of salinity cell walls disintegrate. The oceans would have become like the Dead Sea.

The stabilization of the oxygen concentration of the atmosphere at 21 percent: This is the optimal balance for the maintenance of life. With a few percent less oxygen, the larger animals and flying insects could not have found enough energy to survive; with a few percent more, even damp vegetation would burn. (A forest fire started by lightning would burn fiercely and indefinitely, eventually burning all vegetation on the Earth's land surface.)

The presence of a small quantity of ammonia in the atmosphere: This is the amount needed to neutralize the strong sulphuric and nitric acids produced by the natural combination of sulphur and nitrogen compounds with oxygen (thunderstorms, for example, produce tons of nitric acid). The result is that rain and soil remain at the optimal levels of acidity for the preservation of life.

The existence of the ozone layer in the upper atmosphere: This shields life on the surface from ultraviolet radiation, which damages the molecules essential for life, particularly the DNA molecules found in every living cell. Without it life would have been very rapidly annihilated.

On the basis of these and other "homeostatic" behaviors, Lovelock concludes that the climate and chemical properties of the Earth seem always to have been optimal for life as we know it.

Critics of the Gaia Hypothesis might argue that the origin and maintenance of life on this planet has resulted from a series of very lucky coincidences, rather than planetary homeostatic behavior. If, for example, the proportion of ammonia in the early atmosphere had been a little higher or lower, the Earth would have ended up too hot or too cold for life. They might argue that it has been a series of flukes that kept the planet's surface temperature roughly constant while the sun's output changed; a series of flukes that kept the levels of carbon dioxide, oxygen, salt, and many other chemicals at optimal levels for the maintenance of life; and a fluke that there is an ozone layer to protect us from lethal quantities of ultraviolet light.

In the same way, a cell in the human body, observing the body's continued survival through heat, cold, and many other changes, might, if it were so inclined, put it all down to a series of lucky coincidences; the body just happens to sweat when it is hot, just happens to shiver when it is cold, just happens to take in the right amount of nutrients when they are needed. Perhaps by fluke blood sugar, acidity, and salinity stay at the optimal levels and red blood cells happen to bring along oxygen and take away wastes. From such a point of view, the body survives from one moment to the next as a result of an extremely fortunate series of coincidences.

This quite definitely is not the case. The body behaves in a well-ordered manner with a definite sense of purpose. It sweats, shivers, eats, breathes, and regulates its internal functions and chemical constituents in order to preserve homeostasis, and so survive.

Just as this self-regulating principle makes more sense of the body's activities, so it makes more sense of the planet's. Gaia appears to be a self-regulating, self-sustaining system, continually adjusting its chemical, physical, and biological processes in order to support life and its continuing evolution.

Does the Gaia Hypothesis imply that the biosphere is a single living organism? Lovelock is cautious on this point. He sees the atmosphere to be similar to a beehive, a biological construction designed to maintain a chosen environment, though not actually living in itself. But if we take the atmosphere, oceans, and soil to be intrinsic parts of a complete biosystem, couldn't we then speculate that the system as a whole is alive? And if so, is humanity an intricate, inseparable part of a larger living system? Before we can answer these questions, we need to look more closely at the general characteristics common to all living systems and see to what extent Gaia satisfies them.

Transformation Session Three

Instructor's Outline

First Evening

What is the cause of rape?

What is the psychological mechanism that causes it?

Projection

What causes child abuse?

What makes you think that someone else is doing something?

What allows people to rape the planet?

They don't believe it.

No matter what a person does, there is an intrinsic self-worth involved.

Whatever they do in the next moment determines a lot of things.

The earth is effected by how you are (to yourself and others) and what you do. How do you get those thoughts? All of them. Depending on your vision, the thoughts either fit into it or they don't. When they don't fit, you can challenge them. They are either congruent or they aren't.

Jealousy is not congruent with your vision. Either is hate.

⌘ When you don't have what you are used to, you have a void. The void is the beginning of a rewiring possibility. You can also rewire when you are in a huge reaction and you stop yourself and do a new behavior right in the middle which is congruent with your vision. You want the void.

We have chosen to incarnate into this world as a transition team. We are too old to be transitioning to. We are here to make the planet safe.

The kids coming in are different. The souls choosing to incarnate now are lighter and different. They don't have the same believe systems as we do. They are coming in free. When their parents don't allow them to be who they are, they rebel. The kids today are looking for a home, (to be themselves). We thought that home meant being taken care of. This crop needs watering. They don't belong to us...we need to make sure that they grow up without our preconceptions. Kids in gangs have chosen the alternative. Look in kids eyes when we talk to them. Don't let them look down or you won't make a connection.

- When you get to the core of what's going on in you - that's when you cannot be thrown off track by thought forms.
- Self - Love is a context - a way of being. If you are truly in self love and someone else is in self hate, then they will not want to be around you.
- You do lose people when you grow.
- How you shift context is to take your fear or whatever and give it a bigger space.
- When we interpret our relationship we are in relationship with our minds.
- The only true safety comes from being vulnerable.
- You can't change your unconscious beliefs. You have to make them conscious to change them. The way to make them conscious is to live your vision (and all of the unconscious things will knock you against a wall). When you do what you say you will do, you find things out.

BREAK

- If you can return to the physical sensation that proceeds the thought and stay with that sensation you can get to the core.
- If you can watch your reaction and create enough space to see it you can change it.
- Until you take responsibility for the problem in your relationship it won't work
- What you experience can only come from you.
- There is a difficulty having friendship and romantic love co-exist. Romantic love is based on people being a certain way. Living out some fantasies; It is when you expect a person to be a certain way for romance. It does not co-exist with friendship. It never lasts. We suggest having friendship first, You are never with the person when you first fall in love.

transformed when it is given to the feminine energy. Then it is transformed back to the masculine in the form of words.

If we were in tune with the environment in the way that we could be, we would be connected on a spiritual level. If our male and female were balanced in the way we dream about—being connected with the heaven and earth, our masculine and feminine energies and relationships would be balanced. Our masculine and feminine energies would flow—and we could balance it with our relationship with the earth.

Wanting to be taken care of is a child's energy—not an adult's. How could anyone on the outside know better than you what you need? Taking care of yourself is much easier than getting it from the outside.

How many women here want to take care of men? How many women and men want to be taken care of? What does it mean to you?

A lot of couples have to deal with the fact that the man pays and the woman provides emotionally. This situation is equal, if both want it.

Are we willing to create in a place of not knowing? Without a real risk you can't do anything and nothing can happen. You have to risk something deep or you can't change.

A risk right now: be with the earth and know that everything outside and around us is alive. Don't just think about it—be with it.

- FIRE - cleansing, purification, healing, passion, creation. Sex without true fire creates pornography and perversion. The merging inside of earth (feminine) and air (masculine) creates fire.

- WATER - things manifest quickly (Colorado). (Vermont is not a place where things manifest), emotions, love, always changing, never the same. The "subconscious."

⚔ Without knowing what is true in this culture about the relative value of masculine and feminine we will not be able to achieve the true marriage of male and female inside.

- Ask how many people are still projecting?
 - Who is afraid to stop?

BREAK - Send people out to be with the earth, the trees, the hills. Have them meditate on seeing themselves as they TRULY are in the present. Then commit to seeing all that's true around them, adding nothing to the experience.

- Share what people discovered:

- Ask them for the rest of the day to only speak essence.

Every time you let someone's truth in - that truth changes.

Everybody knows everything if they pay attention.

- There is no "out here" only "in there". That's where safety is.

LUNCH

- Teach what happens to your history when you are in the present moment.

- Do you think anybody can really stay in a relationship unless both are in the present? NO - you would not be with the person you are with.

- Being in the present, just being with what's true - is the entree to the metaphysical.

Either you are blaming or you are not. If you say what's true without embellishing it - it changes.

The secret to freedom is to have an experience of what's true in the moment.

- Stop putting out on the world that you don't see yourself as OK.
- People need to discover why they choose to be experienced the way they are experienced.
- Ask them to read article "Why I Survived Aids" tonight.

Everything but love is a projection. Projections make you feel more than or less than.

If you think someone is psychotic and they are, it is not a projection. If you judge them, it is a projection. All judgments are a projection.

When an earthquake or hurricane comes, you don't judge them. Taking back your projections is the most important work you can do to create a world for our children...to connect with their souls.

What personal steps are you willing to take to create a free and spiritual world?

Who has animals and who doesn't? Everyone should have at least one.

- Think about what the high energy vibration rock means and what low vibration rock means.

- Think about your homes and whether you have rocks and shells in it. Do you think that rocks protect you?

🔑 The essence of Marriage: A trinity of male, female and child. Until you merge that trinity in a balance, will never have a true marriage. You will always approach relationship from need.

- Talk about the archetype of marriage.
- Talk about needy vs. sexual.

🔑 When you share about your relationship to each other be sure its what's true in your experience and not a story that you make up.

- When you have a physical reaction you are not being responsible.

🔑 When all three aspects come together in a marriage its a true marriage, emotional, mental, spiritual (friendship).

- Without all three it is not a marriage - its a symbiosis.

🔑 The war of the worlds: Who is responsible for your experience?

- When you take support either you make it yours or you don't.

🔑 When you know something and you act the opposite - it drives you crazy.

🔑 None of us would do something that we think is an illusion.

Day Three

You can't take anything in when you are so focused on yourself. There is no space for it because you are speaking a different language. How old is the child who wants all of the focus?

Feminine energy is receiving and masculine energy is giving.

The way to be taken care of is to give what you want to receive.

The true meaning of transformation is to take garbage (lead) and turn it into gold. It means giving without wanting to get anything back.

The world of superior and inferior is a prescribed picture. Everything gets sucked up and vacuumed in.

What you feel is just what you feel. It doesn't mean anything.

Keep finding out what is true, and you will create space. Then you will get to a place where you can just be.

Your thought patterns are what the problems are.

If you focus on you you'll be bored. Look outside and see what is going on...how old people are and what they are doing.

We were born with a birthright to be human; to love, feel, give. This program is about transforming into human.

When you take your projections back, there is no way to pretend.

- Spend the morning handling projections.

It is terrifying to take projections back. There is no way to pretend. If you have spent your life pretending - its rough.

We all have to be reprogrammed. Because none of us were taught that we were responsible for our experience. We are doing what we are asking our kids to do - be responsible.

🔑 Support is meant the way it is meant for that moment. It is given exactly the way it is for a reason. You don't get the result if you change the support.

- Everybody goes for quick relief when they get support. Support is always uncomfortable. Support is meant to change beliefs.

LUNCH

- Do Aura balancing exercise: "For Creating Harmony With the Earth"
- Spend 1/2 hour finishing projections. In order to transform, you have to speak the unspeakable. When you do, all of the stuff gets loosened up. Deal with anything that is a blatant truth that you are ignoring.

The mind's purpose is to protect itself — so it will tell you why you shouldn't say things.

- Then burn papers (projections) and send people out for 45 minutes to walk, hike, whatever.

🔑 Will is like a muscle. You have to use it to have it get strong. It will not develop without use. Waiting till you want to do something - you will wait forever. The more you use it the more you will want to use it.

You know it is projection when there is any separation. You have to deal with it in the moment.

🔑 The greatest key to freedom is "I am not willing to project on you anymore" and meaning it with true passion.

What is dependency? An unwillingness to take care of yourself and to receive.

It is an indulgence to say "this might be irresponsible or a reaction...but..."

You have to share everything, or it is just form. You have to pick your lifestyle and your context.

Anytime you are confronted with a choice, you will have an unexpected block of feelings which are not comfortable.

Evening Assignments:
To be determined.

- 1. Go outside and ask a tree if you can be with. Sit with your back to it for a little while, and replenish your energy. Feel how the tree replenishes your energy. Make sure you have your stone. Really listen.*
- 2. Write down all of your projections tonight. Tomorrow morning we will burn them in a ceremony.*
- 3. Watch the movie At Play in the Fields of the Lord.*

Everyone is God; every tree. If we don't take this into account in every interaction, what happens to you when you don't see yours? You don't get the gifts of the universe. It is such a loss.

🔑 You see more of everyone's God when you start taking back your projections.

🔑 Look for the God/divine in everyone. There is always a gift in every interaction.

Will everyone commit to remembering and behaving that everyone is God?

🔑 When you are born and you bond with your parents - the essence they have of the divine gets passed on to you.

🔑 We are all connected by energy fields. Some people need to stay together to learn. Their souls agreed to do it together.

🔑 Where does God or our sense of the divine fit into our everyday life? There is always opportunity to experience God by being in the true moment.

🔑 Ask people to be willing to experience the truth of the God in them. Saluting the God in everything.

🔑 When two people show themselves to each other - that is an experience of God.

- When we get close to someone, that taps into the bond with our parents which is an experience of God. At that point people either follow it through to God again or go into reaction and get little and see the other person as parent.
- People need to get to the core of feelings and not worry about what people think of them.
- Recognize the God in other people and take them seriously. People are desperate to connect. If you connect - people want you and want to give to you. We ask them to connect with everyone. It won't look the way you want it to.

BECAUSE THERE'S SO MUCH TO LEARN AND SO LITTLE TIME

October 21, 1991

Dear Family,

What a wonderful time we had at the river!

Enclosed is the final chapter of the POP joke and quote book, along with some other handouts we want you to have.

Thank you all for making this program so successful. As usual, the results were greater than our dreams, which were pretty high.

We love you all very much.

Judith

Judith

Peg

Peg

Enclosures

PD:ss

ETP II
Transformation

“One Ugly Minute at a Time”

POP Jokebook
Part 3

I saw it as being really open to him sexually.

Maybe your father can do the firewalk.

When the words aren't grounded it's like blue balls of the mind.

That's karm-upence.

Sometimes I see him as being too little. You mean short?

Island girl. ♪ ♪

Dominoes until you handle everything.

Kind of makes you scared to think, doesn't it? – Patty

National Enquirer Headline... "I Was Raised by a Six Year Old."

I feel like this is the last piece.
Don't worry, there'll be another. – Patty

At least she didn't ask you what you did in school!

Project-ile vomit.

Partners in slime. – Susan F.

We just walk right in at Immediate Care.

How much money is it?... A possible merger!

Bankruptcy of the heart.

In the land of neither place...

Yes!! Augh! – Lynn

One life at a time! – George

Desperately seeking Susan.

Say it again, Susan. Everyone is saying “ah ha!”
So there must be something there.

Then I won't have to buy any more kittens. – Susan
F.

You want to be adopted? – Patty

The gossip monger speaks.

Transformation

I didn't know I was in bliss. – Marlene

Oh, I get it, you want to get closer to God. – Julia

Michael row the boat ashore.

My mother told me I was just stubbornly hanging onto a dream. My father said maybe it was time to move on.

Tree slut.

You still in that other lifetime, Darrell?
The ten faces of Christ.

The year of Shane's birthday.

Grambo. – Sybil

She'd probably tell us to live together for a while. –
Avram

I'm hoping she's dead by then. – Jonathan

The price of admission is forgetfulness. – Michael

Get them doggies movin'.

Cowboy Nazi.

I am constipated in every way. – Patty

I get a new career every program. – Darrell

Woman cuts off head to see what's inside. – Sybil
(Credit to Sybil for this quote during session 2.)

Transformation

How To Handle a Projection

- 1) Say the projection to yourself. Notice how you are interpreting your experience.
- 2) Look at the effect of the projection on yourself and the other person or people. Are you separate? Are you making yourself or someone else good, bad, superior or inferior?
- 3) Find out what is true about the projection - something that you don't want to deal with or acknowledge is true about yourself. Be willing to experience the reality of the projection as it relates to you.
- 4) See what power the projection gives you. When you hold on to your point of view, it controls the limits of what is possible. The other person has no say in the relationship.
- 5) If you dare, let the other person in. This means to trust that the other person has no negative motivation, no matter what the evidence is to the contrary. Be vulnerable. With vulnerability comes true power and clarity.

© Quantum Educational Discoveries, Inc. 1991

MEDITATION

Taken from “Touch the Earth” compiled by T.C. McLuhan

Tatanka-ohitika, or Brave Buffalo, a Sioux Indian, was a prominent medicine man of the Standing Rock Reservation, as had been his father. Tatanka-ohitika was born near the present site of Pollock, North Dakota, and at the age of 73, in 1911, he described his dream of the sacred stone, large stones having religious value among the Sioux. Tatanka-ohitika speaks of Wakan tanka, the Sioux term for the higher being that is the source of all things. Wakan means mysterious, tanka great. “The exact significance of the term in the mind of the Sioux,” Frances Densmore explains (in Teton Sioux Music), “is as difficult to formulate as the exact meaning of the word God in the mind of Christians.”

When I was ten years of age I looked at the land and the rivers, the sky above, and the animals around me and could not fail to realize that they were made by some great power. I was anxious to understand this power that I questioned the trees and the bushes. It seemed as though the flowers were staring at me, and I wanted to ask them “Who made you?” I looked at the moss-covered stones; some of them seemed to have the features of a man, but they could not answer me. Then I had a dream, and in my dream one of these small round stones appeared to me and told me that the maker of all was Wakan tanka, and that in order to honor him I must honor his works in nature. The stone said that by my search I had shown myself worthy of supernatural help. It said that if I were curing a sick person I might ask its assistance, and that all the forces of nature would help me work a cure.

It is significant that certain stones are not found buried in the earth, but are on the top of high buttes. They are round, like the sun and moon, and we know that all things which are round are related to each other. Things which are alike in their nature grow to look like each other, and these stones have lain there along time, looking at the sun. Many pebbles and stones have been shaped in the current of a stream, but these stones were found far from the water and have been exposed only to the sun and the wind. The earth contains many thousand such stones hidden beneath its surface. The thunderbird is said to be related to these stones, and when a man or an animal is to be punished, the thunderbird strikes the person, and if it were possible to follow the course of the lightning, one of these stones would be found embedded in the earth. Some believe that these stones descend with the lightning, but I believe they are on the ground and are projected downward by the bolt. In all my life I have been faithful to the sacred stones. I have lived according to their requirements, and they have helped me in all my troubles. I have tried to qualify myself as well as possible to handle these sacred stones, yet I know that I am not worthy to speak to Wakan tanka. I make my request of the stones and they are my intercessors.

MEDITATION

TALKING STONES

In this technique, stones are struck with knives to produce sound. If the right stone and the right knife are brought together, the sound will be musical and, if repeated, can be used to induce a trance-like state.

High-vibration stones are best for this. The technique is simple: hold the stone and strike it gently with a knife blade. Have a wide variety of knives and stones (be careful of the knives; they should be dull for this use).

After you have experimented for a while, select the combination producing the best sound. In a candle-lit room or on a wind-swept hill or anywhere, of course, strike the rock and listen to the sound.

Repeat in any rhythm you like. Just like the medicine man's drum or rattle, the sounds and rhythms will work to put you into a relaxed, drowsy state. At this time you can meditate or simply experience the moment and sensations.

This should be done out of sight (and hearing) of others. At night beneath a full moon, it is extremely powerful.

THE HEALING POWERS OF TREES

ALMOND: Clairvoyance. Wisdom. Money. Loans. Business.
APPLE: Healing. Prosperity. Love. Perpetual youth.
ASH: Protection.
APRICOT: Love.
ASPEN: Protection.
BIRCH: Protection. Purification. Fertility. New beginnings.
CEDAR: Prosperity. Longevity.
COCONUT: Purity. Chastity. Healing.
CYPRESS: Past life workings. Protection.
ELDER: Healing. Protection. Prosperity.
ELM: Protection.
EUCALYPTUS: Healing.
FIG: Fertility. Strength. Energy. Health.
HAWTHORN: Cleansing. Marriage. Love. Protection.
HAZEL: Marriage. Protection. Reconciliation.
HEMLOCK: Not recommended.
JUNIPER: Protection.
LEMON: Healing. Chastity. Neutrality.
LIME: Healing. Chastity. Neutrality.
LINDEN: Protection.
MAPLE: Love.
MULBERRY: Knowledge. Wisdom. The will.
OAK: Healing. Strength. Money. Longevity.
OLIVE: Peace. Fruitfulness. Security. Money. Marriage. Fidelity.
ORANGE: Love. Marriage.
PALM: Strength.
PEACH: Love.
PINE: Purification. Health. Fortune. Fertility. Prosperity.
ROWAN: Protection. Strength.
WALNUT: Healing. Protection.
WILLOW: Healing. Protection. Enchantments. Wishing. Easy delivery of babies.
YEW: Not recommended.

ETP II Transformation

Session Three

Friday evening Sept 27:

- The focus of the whole program is the effect that each person's behavior has on the whole
- In that context deal with:
 - whether people have been living their visions
 - go over the assignments from the first two sessions, peoples' Purposes and their commitments to a spiritual relationship
 - bring everyone up to date
- Give out Handout on Elements of Earth, Air, Water, and Fire and ask people to read before class tomorrow.

Saturday Sept 28 through Monday Sept 30 at 1:00:

- Throughout the program we will integrate self, relationship and the planet using the exercises and meditations where appropriate to the content that people are dealing with.
- Meditations and exercises:
 - > Earth
 - "Rock Meditations"
 - "Talking Stones"
 - "To Regain Lost Energy"

> Air

- Have people go outside and stand in a circle. With eyes closed, listen to the sounds of the the wind and on the air. Hear what the wind and air say to them. Share in large group inside.

> Water:

- "Water Gazing"

> Fire:

- Candle Meditation: Have people sit in their groups and stare into a lighted candle. Have them share out loud what images they see about themselves in relation to the rest of the group. Perhaps get into a past life connection for entire group. (probably Saturday night)
- Firewalk: If seems like will support the work- do a firewalk. Remember to allow time for preparing the wood. No children.
- Bonfires at night.

• Auxiliary Handouts:

- " The Healing Powers of Trees"
- Exerpt from "The Global Brain: on the Gaia Principle
- Exerpt from "Touch the Earth" about the power of stones

Monday Sept 30 from 1:00 PM - 3:00 PM

- Graduation and celebration

permanent

ETP II Transformation Session 3

Key Teachings

🔑 Self-love is a context, a way of being. If you are truly in self-love, someone who is in self-hate will not want to be around you.

🔑 If you can return to the physical sensation that precedes the thought and stay with the sensation, you can get to the core.

🔑 What you experience can only come from you.

🔑 As long as you maintain your projections, you do not have the benefit of your experience.

🔑 What you do is for you and no one else, no matter what it looks like.

🔑 Everybody knows everything if they pay attention.

🔑 Either you are blaming or you are not.

🔑 The secret to freedom is to have an experience of what's true.

🔑 Without knowing what is true in this culture about the relative value of masculine and feminine, we will not be able to achieve the true marriage of male and female inside.

🔑 The essence of marriage:
A trinity of male, female and child. Until you merge that trinity in a balance, you will never have a true marriage. You will always approach the relationship from need.

🔑 When you share about your relationship to each other, be sure it's what is true in your experience, and not a story that you make up.

🔑 The way to get passion is to tell the truth, make a choice and risk the unspeakable.

🔑 To ignore the blatant truth about something creates projection.

🔑 Passion also comes from picking something you want and doing it.

🔑 We put whatever belief we have about ourselves into the universe. Then that belief attracts similar beliefs in the universe.

🔑 Support is meant the way it is meant for that moment. It is given exactly the way it is for a reason. You don't get the result if you change the support.

🔑 Will is like a muscle. You have to use it to have it get strong. It will not develop without use. You will wait forever if you wait until you want to do something.

🔑 The mind's purpose is to protect itself so it will always give you reasons not to do something.

🔑 The biggest challenge for this group will be to bring your God energy into your everyday life just by how you are and not by being different from anyone.

🔑 When you "wake up" you see and then you act.

🔑 It's impossible to react to another person.

🔑 Without risking the unknown you will never know how safe you are.

🔑 The way you feel about yourself and the way you feel about what you are doing is a result of what you've done.

🔑 Unacknowledged neediness is gross.

🔑 If you do it, I do it, because we are one.

🔑 If you ever pick somebody over your friends and self you will lose yourself.

🔑 When you are born and you bond with your parents, the essence they have of the divine gets passed on to you.

🔑 As long as you are in the present you can learn something new.

🔑 We are all connected by energy fields. Some people need to stay together to learn. Their souls agreed to do it together.

🔑 Where does God or our sense of the divine fit into our everyday life?

There is always opportunity to experience God by being in the true moment. Be willing to experience the truth of the God in you saluting the God in everything.

When two people show themselves to each other, that is an experience of God.

Recognize the God in other people and take them seriously. People are desperate to connect. If you connect, people want you and want to give to you. Connect with everyone. It won't look the way you want it to.

Any relationship will work where both people want the same thing.

¶ The only way you will ever find out if a program worked is to do the work involved in it.

¶ When you get to the core of what's going on in you you cannot be thrown off track by thought forms.

Transformation

Key Teachings

- 🔑 Don't interpret your answers, or they won't take you to the places you want to go.
- 🔑 The aspect of Choices that is spiritual is to be grounded...to receive information as it is given, in the form it is given.
- 🔑 To give up the need to be perfect: If you accept yourself for just how you are in any moment, you are perfect.
- 🔑 A major block to experiencing your spirituality is projection.
- 🔑 One of the secrets to receiving what you want is by giving what you need.
- 🔑 No one can have the same relationship with the same person.
- 🔑 Congruence = intention aligned with attitude + action.
- 🔑 When you don't tell the truth, it is emotional anorexia.
- 🔑 The world of pictures is ending.
- 🔑 Comparing yourself is a lie. Any lie that you accept affects your heart chakra and your ability to create and receive.
- 🔑 Once you know what's true and you say it out loud to a body of your peers, you are committed and accountable.
- 🔑 Freedom only occurs when you choose.
- 🔑 Not feeling like enough is a lie. There is no such thing. Find someone who feels they are enough and model yourself after them.

- ⌘ If you judge yourself for being lazy, don't be lazy anymore. Get busy! It means committing—telling yourself and others the truth.
- ⌘ Your relationship with you...
Any time you are fighting, stop yourself and take 2-3 breaths.
- ⌘ Everything you do with your relationship with you, you also do with others.
- ⌘ When you are driving, you don't look behind you and say it was a bad road. So why do we do punish ourselves for our history in our lives?
- ⌘ To show love when you feel anything else will slug up your chakras like molasses.
- ⌘ Cherish your discomfort. It is yours. Don't throw it away. Keep it up. The more discomfort you can tolerate, the more you can transform.
- ⌘ All humans are the same. Everyone feels what you feel.
- ⌘ You have the power to choose your behavior.
- ⌘ Giving up judgments of yourself or others is a quick way to get to the fifth dimension.
- ⌘ As long as you believe you should be taken care of, you will have scarcity. Believing that you can't take care of yourself comes from always being taken care of.
- ⌘ Money is like a form of barter. How you deal with it is how you deal with love and relationships.
- ⌘ The only emotion we really have is love. Everything else is a reaction to love.
- ⌘ If you aren't willing to change your behaviors, the personal growth path is a big mistake.

- ⌘ Make sure when you do this work that you put a gold balloon (not too thick) around you when you feel afraid.
- ⌘ No one out there is out to get you. All of the monsters are inside of you.
- ⌘ Everybody knows everything (even if they are handicapped). There are no secrets, there is only delayed information.
- ⌘ What would happen in your life if you really heard (and listened to) what people are saying, all of the time? Imagine living like every person is a beautiful person with something to give.
- ⌘ The more hardened we become to our softness and pain, the less we experience it.
- ⌘ The paradox of what you don't want to deal with is what people see. The way to the light is the darkness. (Take a night light!)
- ⌘ You can't have a picture of your feelings—you have to have it be whatever it is. The doing of something might not feel good, but so what? If you are aware of doing what you are doing, there will be pain in the process. It won't feel good.
- ⌘ Real support will not be comfortable or feel right.
- ⌘ For spiritual growth and joy, go into a void—you have to empty your cup.
- ⌘ The results of giving up judgments is that you become a magician.

Transformation Key Teachings

- 🔑 The reason we try to change someone else when we know we can't is to avoid the truth of what is.
- 🔑 If you tell your real truth, you start to erase your past.
- 🔑 Regret and worry waste time and eliminates opportunities. Planning and creating the future is not the same as worrying about the future.
- 🔑 Only share your reactions when you want to get clear or get to the truth—not when you feel obsessed to share it.
- 🔑 The more ordinary your life is the more powerful and sexual you become.
- 🔑 If you aren't attracted to yourself, you can't be very sexual.
- 🔑 Your body reflects how you live your life, your values. It happens over time.
- 🔑 If you make a call to the universe and you mean it, things will happen.
- 🔑 The way to get what you want out of life is to be yourself, all the way, all the time.
- 🔑 If you try to be the special one with someone, you lose them. "Specialness" cuts you off from the rest of the world.
- 🔑 When you live the form of marriage but not the spirit, you are a hypocrite.
- 🔑 You can say all the right words and still hate yourself. To stop your own self-hate, start doing the behaviors that create self-love.

Transformation

Key Teachings

🔑 When you don't act the way you are conditioned to behaving, you experience a void. When you experience a void, rewiring is a possibility. You want the void.

🔑 Believing comes from your mind; knowing comes from your soul.

🔑 The way to change your unconscious beliefs is to make them conscious. You do this by living your vision (and all of the unconscious things will knock you against a wall).

🔑 Everyone chooses their parents and they choose you. It's not accidental.

🔑 All souls are here with their own reasons. Who are you to judge?

🔑 Rocks are alive as much as trees. Create equality with yourself and the outside; ask for permission before hugging a tree.

🔑 In the highest sense of the word, feminine is truly receiving. In the true concept of earth (feminine energy) there is no concept of "fairness." It deals only with what is.

🔑 Wanting to be taken care of is a child's energy, not an adults. How could anyone on the outside know better than you what you need? Taking care of yourself is much easier than getting it from the outside.

🔑 A risk right now: be with the earth and know that everything outside and around you is alive. Don't just think about it — be with it.

🔑 There is a big difference between what you need and what you want. Know the difference...the quickest way is to give yourself what you need ... friendship, truth from others, compassion. To really blend with the world and be an independent entity, only give what you need.

- 🔑 If you think someone is psychotic and they are, it is not a projection. If you judge them, it is a projection. All judgments are a projection.
- 🔑 Taking back your projections is the most important work you can do to create a world for our children...to connect with their souls.
- 🔑 The true meaning of transformation is to take lead and turn it into gold.
- 🔑 What you feel is just what you feel. It doesn't mean anything.
- 🔑 Your thought patterns and interpretations are what cause the problems.
- 🔑 If you focus on you, you will be bored. Look outside and see what is going on...see how people really are.
- 🔑 You know you are projecting when you feel separate.
- 🔑 The greatest key to freedom is saying, "I am not willing to project on you anymore," and meaning it with true passion.
- 🔑 No one can make anyone else's life good.
- 🔑 Our parents are here for themselves, and we are here for us. All of our parents were there for us, to the best of their ability. They did the best they could. When you don't believe this, you are destroying your life.
- 🔑 Instead of you blaming your parents, give to them instead.
- 🔑 You see more of everyone as God when you start taking back your projections.
- 🔑 Look for the God/Divine in everyone. There is always a gift in every interaction.

10/25/92 ss

Transformation

Transformation

Key Teachings

🔑 When you don't act the way you are conditioned to behaving, you experience a void. When you experience a void, rewiring is a possibility. You want the void.

🔑 Believing comes from your mind; knowing comes from your soul.

🔑 The way to change your unconscious beliefs is to make them conscious. You do this by living your vision (and all of the unconscious things will knock you against a wall).

🔑 ~~Everyone chooses their parents and they choose you. It's not accidental.~~

🔑 All souls are here with their own reasons. Who are you to judge?

🔑 Rocks are alive as much as trees. Create equality with yourself and the outside; ask for permission before hugging a tree.

🔑 In the highest sense of the word, feminine is truly receiving. In the true concept of earth (feminine energy) there is no concept of "fairness." It deals only with what is.

🔑 Wanting to be taken care of is a child's energy, not an adults. How could anyone on the outside know better than you what you need? Taking care of yourself is much easier than getting it from the outside.

🔑 A risk right now: be with the earth and know that everything outside and around you is alive. Don't just think about it — be with it.

🔑 There is a big difference between what you need and what you want. Know the difference...the quickest way is to give yourself what you need ... friendship, truth from others, compassion. To really blend with the world and be an independent entity, only give what you need.

🔑 If you think someone is psychotic and they are, it is not a projection. If you judge them, it is a projection. All judgments are a projection.

🔑 Taking back your projections is the most important work you can do to create a world for our children...to connect with their souls.

🔑 The true meaning of transformation is to take lead and turn it into gold.

🔑 What you feel is just what you feel. It doesn't mean anything.

🔑 Your thought patterns and interpretations are what cause the problems.

🔑 If you focus on you, you will be bored. Look outside and see what is going on...see how people really are.

🔑 You know you are projecting when you feel separate.

🔑 The greatest key to freedom is saying, "I am not willing to project on you anymore," and meaning it with true passion.

🔑 No one can make anyone else's life good.

🔑 Our parents are here for themselves, and we are here for us. All of our parents were there for us, to the best of their ability. They did the best they could. When you don't believe this, you are destroying your life.

🔑 Instead of you blaming your parents, give to them instead.

🔑 You see more of everyone as God when you start taking back your projections.

🔑 Look for the God/Divine in everyone. There is always a gift in every interaction.

10/25/92 ss

F

Hawaii MBZ

WHO SHOULD SAY WHAT TO WHOM ABOUT WHAT & WHY?

Pick a problem that currently exists in your business. With that problem in mind, answer each of the following questions in two sentences or less. Please do this on your own.

1. What is the problem?
2. How did it develop?
3. How long has it been an issue for your business?
4. Is it part of a pattern?
5. What have you done to date to resolve it?

When you have answered the questions above, read the following and think about it. Please do NOT write your response. When everyone in your group is done with the questions, share your problems with each other. Decide as a group what is the best response to the following.

6. What do you need to communicate and to whom do you need to communicate it? What do others need to communicate to you, who are those individuals?

Synergy

Teamwork

Intimacy

Congruence

Problem Solving

Comm

NAMASTE
(I bow to the God within You.)

I honor the place within you of love, of light, of truth, of peace.

*I honor the place in you where,
if you are in that place in you,
and I am in that place in me,
there is only one of us.*

Transformation

ETP II Transformation

Interpretation and Projection

Interpret: To explain to oneself the meaning of.

When we have physical sensations, we call them a feeling. Then we put a value on that feeling (good or bad). And then we cover all that with a thought about the value of our feeling, e.g. "I don't care!" That value and thought are our interpretations of the experience we are having. This was true for our parents and their parents also.

We interpret our sensations the same way our families did. If our family called a sensation of fluttering in our stomach "fear", then so do we. But if our family called that same fluttery sensation "excitement", we do, too. We have the same judgement or value attached to "fear" that they did, unless, as we grow in our lives, we consciously decide to shift our context.

It's rare for anyone to just experience sensations without labeling them. We all do it automatically until we choose to know the truth of our experience rather than our thought or interpretation of it.

Any meaning that we give to an experience that separates us from that experience, usually in the form of a judgement or being right, is an interpretation.

Projection: Unconscious attribution of one's own feelings, attitudes, or desires to others.

When we are children we all project. Everything we see is based on our experience of not being separate from our parents. For example, as a little child we thought that if we closed our eyes, our parents couldn't see us. Conversely, when our parents wanted us to be any certain way, they projected their desires on us, and because we didn't experience ourselves as separate, those desires became our own. We have no other option until 5 years old or so when we begin to experience ourselves as separate from our parents.

As an adult, projection is giving our energy and power away by thinking that we are behaving the way we do because someone else wants us to. Even if they do want us to! Or thinking that someone else is feeling what we are feeling. We do this because we don't want to see ourselves or be responsible for our experience. Projection is a way of refusing to leave our childhoods.

Any judgement of anyone or anything outside ourselves is a projection.

To discover how you project:

Tell yourself what behaviors you do that you would never do if it weren't for other people.

Tell yourself what feelings or thoughts you have that are about someone else.