

Evening Series.

How Many People
are really in your bed?

25/10/2020

How many people
are there in the house?

EVENING SERIES

MANUAL

SECTION I

OUTLINES

Instructor's Outline

"How Many People Are Really in Your Bed?"

HOW MANY PEOPLE ARE REALLY IN YOUR BED?

Instructor's Outline

Opening:

Play Classical Music while people are being seated

Welcome people to the seminar.

Set the context by being natural, friendly and real with the participants right away.

*Enroll people with questions like:
(Be sure you connect with anyone who participates.)*

*How many people have exactly the relationship they want?
(If any - applaud)*

How many people want to improve the relationship they have?

How many of those people think it won't take much?

*How many people think it will take a lot of work?
(Do this with a light touch.)*

How many of you in a relationship think that it won't change, want to leave and feel like you can't?

Who is here with a lover or spouse? Please raise your hands.

Anyone here that is not in a relationship and would like one?

(Have them look around and see if they are interested in anyone. Clown it. Make it fun.)

 Promise of Evening:

We think the reason relationships don't work is because we are not with the person we are with.

*We are with our pictures of the way a relationship should be;
or we have memories of people from the past getting in the way;
or we are not free to be real because we think it's not okay to be ourselves.*

We say that this is like having a bunch of extra people in your bed.

Tonight is about how all those other people got in your bed and how to get them out.

And for dessert we have a recipe for ecstatic sex.

This is a condensed version of what we do in our longer QED program, The Choices Weekend. We'll be referring to the Weekend throughout the evening and we'll talk about it more at the end.

 Ask: What do you want in a relationship?

(Put the answers on a flip chart. Always use more than one primary color on any flip chart. The use of color engages the right side of the brain in the learning process.)

 Then ask: Do you have it? Why not? Is there anything on this list that you don't want in a relationship? Why do so many people not have what they want?

(Work with what they say. Never make anyone wrong or discount what they say. If you can use what someone says to teach your next piece of information, always do so. As much as possible we want the learning to be interactive and self-discovery. However, do not agree with something that you don't experience as true just to avoid someone being upset. Give people the respect of treating them like equals and give them space to go through the discomfort that usually occurs when learning new information.)

 Let participants know that this part of the program is about why people don't have what they want - what puts all those other people in the bed with them and their mates.

First, we want to talk a little about how we learn about our pattern for relationships. Where do you think we learn about relationships first? Right, from our parents. Their relationships with each other and their relationships with us created the pattern for our relationships.

In the Weekend, participants do a lot of exploring into just what those patterns are and re-choose the ones they want to keep for themselves.

We think our relationship patterns go all the way back to our birth and infancy. What our birth and early childhoods were like teaches us what to expect in life. The way we learned to be is based on what our parents believed about relationships and sex and being a man or woman.

 Think about it for a minute. What was your parents' relationship like? Was it happy? Did they fight a lot?

Did they have good sex? How many haven't a clue? Did anyone have affairs?

(Create space for questions and sharing.)

 Game: We'd like to play a game now (20 minutes).

Please pick a partner of the other sex.

If you are a woman, be your mother and tell your partner how your mother really felt about relationships, about marriage, about sex, about children.

If you are a man, be your father and do the same.

Then switch - talk about your other parent and how they felt about those things.

 Sharing:

Does anyone want to share anything they discovered or remembered? Anyone find no similarities between their parents and themselves and how they think?

 *Another thing that really affects relationships is which feelings were okay to feel and which feelings were not okay to feel.
(Instructor shares some personal anecdotes about their family.)*

Which feelings were okay in your family?

*Which feelings were not okay? In whose family was it okay to be angry? Sad? Afraid? Really happy? etc...
(Do a poster here with all okay feelings on one side and the not okay ones on the other side.)*

Ask if left out any important ones.

 Here you are - this is your model for relationships - what your parents believed and what was okay to feel in your family.

 So your parents have influenced any relationship you have as an adult - unless you can be the way you want regardless of how they thought. They are in your bed right from the beginning.

 Here's some other ways that extra people get in your bed:

•Chemistry - The kids in us are attracted to people that remind us of our parents. We might not even be aware of it. They may all look, feel, smell, act and sound different than our parents but you can be sure - until your relationship with your mother and father is totally equal and okay, that the kid in you will keep picking someone who is like some aspect of one or both of your parents, to handle the unfinished issues.

So that is another way our parents are in our bed. We may not even see who we are really with. Ever notice how what attracts you to someone at the beginning can turn out to be the very reason you want to dump them?

This brings us to another way other people show up in your bed -

•Attraction - You can be attracted to someone from your head or your heart.

Explain difference between head and heart. Head is about your pictures and heart is about your experience right now.

Exercise:

Look around the room and see who your head thinks is attractive - who fits your pictures - stand up if you want.

Now look around and see who your heart feels attracted to.

How many people got the same ones for both?

If your head picks out the people you are in relationships with, you're in bed with your pictures or your past - not the other person.

Remember your first crush. Remember what they looked like, how you felt, etc.

•Competition - Another person that shows up in your bed is anyone you have ever competed with for another person.

Anyone you compare yourself to. You'll be guilty or suspicious that your honey would rather be with someone else.

Anyone never do this?

(Questions? Sharing?)

•Secrets - *One of the biggest things that creates a crowded bed is secrets. (This is where everyone goes crazy)

A secret is anything that you can't tell your mate because you're afraid of their reaction.

Even a secret from a previous relationship that you never cleared up will show up in your bed now.

Who does not like hearing this?

The secret can be anything. If it can't be talked about it creates a wall.

If it involves someone else they are in your bed with you.

(Questions? Sharing?)

In the Weekend, a lot of secrets are shared and the freedom that it creates is boundless. Participants are always surprised at how much easier it is to be themselves when the secrets are out and the burden is lifted.

•Children - Anytime you ever used your kids as a wedge or in a fight, anytime you picked a child over your mate or your mate over your child, there they are - in bed with you.

(Questions?)

 After the break we'll tell you how to clear everyone except you and your honey out of your bed. And we'll also give you the recipe for ecstatic sex.

 BREAK ( play "I Don't Want to Sleep Alone")

 Here's how to get everyone else out of your bed:.

•Intimacy (Into-Me-See).

Say everything, be real, tell the truth about you.

(Do some modeling about how to be intimate)

Telling your truth is saying "I'm loveable".

Anyone have any truths they want to say to anyone right here?

Anyone have something they need to say to someone they are in a relationship with?

Who's afraid to say it?

Why?

If you said it, who would it get out of your bed?

(usually Mom)

Being intimate will clear everyone extra out. If you are real and intimate you will find out who you are really with. The ghosts, the pictures, the walls, the fears about being wanted - will all leave. Your parents will stay out of your bed. If your relationship is real, it will only flourish. If it can't tolerate the truth, don't you want to know that so that you can find one that does? Who thinks they can't do it? Why?

 Game: Intimacy (15 minutes)

Pick a partner.

Share with your partner what you are like in a relationship and what you really want in a relationship. Be open.

 Sharing. Stay with people. Lots of them are afraid of loss.
Give them lots of space.

Ask them what the consequences inside them are for not being real toward the other person, and what effect that has on their relationship. Speak to their souls not their fear.

 Play "Living Years" by Don Henley

 We urge you to say everything you need to while you can to anyone you love!

 RECIPE FOR ECSTATIC SEX:

We guarantee it if you do it exactly:*

1. Only make love when you both truly want to.

*Who has ever made love when they didn't want to?
Why? What was the effect of that in you?*

2. Share everything while you're making love.

*Let your partner know what is going on in you.
Anybody ever start feeling sad or angry or hurt in the middle of making love? What happens if you don't talk about it and try to stay feeling sexual?*

3. Be responsible for your own sexual experience.

*Who believes they can turn their partner on? Or that their partner turns them on? Anyone ever experience the difference between touching someone to turn them on and touching them because it feels good to you?
How about the difference between the way it feels to be touched because that person loves touching you and being touched because it's their job to make you feel good?*

4. Laugh! It's pretty funny.

 We have lots more information about how to give up old beliefs and how to have everything you want. The Weekend takes the information from tonight much deeper. It lets you experience all the beliefs that have kept you from having what you truly want in your life, your relationships and your businesses and gives you a model for how to change anything.

 We would like you, if you would, to fill out our evaluation forms. We value your feedback and suggestions and are always looking for ways to improve our programs.

 Hand out evaluation forms

 Play "The Rose" by Bette Midler as they fill them out

 Collect forms

 Talk about the next event and/or the Weekend.
Dates, cost, place, deposit, guarantee.

 Give them the opportunity to talk with someone about the Weekend after the program or to enroll tonight if they desire.

 Thank them all for coming.

Play "Out of Africa" as people are leaving.

Instructor's Outline
"Ending the Fight"

ENDING THE FIGHT

Instructor's Outline

🎵 Music: Out of Africa - as participants are entering.

👉 WELCOME: Introduce self briefly. Be open, funny and connected.

👉 QUESTIONS: (this enrolls people in the personal benefit to them of learning tonight's information and in participating.)

Who here has never been in a fight?

Who is in a fight now? A BIG one?

Who is in a fight that they can't seem to get out of?

Who is here with someone they are in a fight with?

Who thinks they would end the fight in a minute but the other person won't?

Has anyone noticed similarities between the person you are in a fight with and a parent?

Anyone in a monster fight with themselves?

👉 Tonight is about how to end the fight. Any fight. We will give you a way that you can really do that.

👉 Sharing: Ask them what the fights they are in are about.

👉 What we think a fight is >> wanting connection, familiarity. (Let them react to that. Don't argue with anyone. Listen! When someone gets heard things change.)

 Tonight is an opportunity to end the fight right now.

 Who can say without any doubt that they want to do that?

 Who is not sure? Why? (write reasons on the flip chart)

 STEPS FOR ENDING THE FIGHT:

(Write each step on the flip chart as you teach it so you end up with the entire list on one chart.)

Step 1:

- Decide that you really want to
 - How to do that > it doesn't have to do with how you FEEL but rather just DECIDING to do it no matter how you feel.*
 - Why people might not want to > fear of change, fear of having what you want, fear of being vulnerable.*
 - It means freedom from past and creating a new future:*
 - Love gets mixed with other feelings in our history. A lot of times in our families love was part of a package deal: Love & Hate, Love & Sadness, Love & Anger, Love & Fear.*

For example, in my family love and were often connected.

Who is aware that love got mixed up with other things in their families? What?..... Thank you.

We think that the energy of the child that we were is still inside each of us. Some people call that the "inner child."

That child loved their family no matter what their childhood was like and still identifies with them.
 - Look inside and see who the person you are in a fight with really is >> literally peel back their face and see who is underneath. Who did you see?*
 - It is difficult to change because it means changing the relationship with that person whose face you saw. It means changing the way YOU treat THEM and the way you see things.*

Step 2:

• Give up blame

- Ask what they think blame is.*
- What we think blame is >> hurt, and fear of a choice you made*
- What blame does >>
it keeps you little, expecting someone else to do something so you feel ok*
- Sometimes it is a mirror, there is something you blame yourself about that you don't want to deal with .*

BLAME GAME: (30 minutes) Choose a partner.

- Share what you blame the person for that you have been in a fight with (even if it is yourself); and share what that person blames you for; and share what you blame yourself for.
- then share what the obstacles are to giving the blame up.

We are going to take a short break and then come back and do the rest of the steps for how to end the fight.

BREAK  PLAY: "All My Ex's Live in Texas"

Step 3:

• Share intimately

- Teach about how to be intimate - talk about yourself*
- "Into-me-see"- how I feel ... what I think ... what I have done to myself because of this fight I have had...
how I have treated you.*
- Give a demonstration of intimacy*

Step 4:

• Feel everything.

Not feeling something creates a wall inside you and causes separation and pain.

NO BLAME GAME: (30 minutes) Choose a partner.

- share intimately with you partner what you need to say to the person you have been in a fight with that is without blame.

Set up the music equipment. The Team Leader will provide you with the set of tapes and a list of tapes to be played in the appropriate order.

Make sure all tapes are cued before the start of the workshop and re-cue them after each song is played. All tapes are to be cued by the end of the workshop.

Be aware of the presenter—this is extremely important. Maintain eye contact with the presenter at all times. Be ready to adjust volume or play a specific song at his or her request.

JOB DESCRIPTION REGISTRAR

Arrive at the hotel one hour before the event.

The primary job of the Registrar is to set up the registration area and ensure that the participants are registered appropriately. Stay outside the room to take late registrations until at least 30 minutes after the beginning of the event.

Greet participants as they walk up to the registration area. The registration process is often the first impression a participant has. Be professional and organized as well as fun.

Act as a personal assistant to the presenter. Check with the presenter before the workshop starts to see if s/he needs anything. Check with them again at the break. Let them know when the workshop is ready to begin. Be as prompt as possible.

After the workshop, sit behind the registration table (now the enrollment table) and take orders for tapes.

Assist with the set up and breakdown of workshop space.

Assist the Team Leader with all handouts and forms that get passed out to the participants.

Participate in enrolling at the end of the workshop.

Assist with the set up and break down of the workshop space.

Support the Team Leader in any way possible.

PRESENTER LOGISTICAL RESPONSIBILITIES:

Meet with the logistics team prior to the event, and make sure they are aligned and that all problems are handled before the workshop starts.

Be aware of the break time so that you announce the right information.

Provide the Team Leader with a list of the music you want played prior to the workshop.

Support the Affiliate in the opening and closing section of the event.

Participate in the enrollment process at the end of the workshop by answering questions.

Monitor the effectiveness of the event/logistics team and give feedback to the Affiliate and/or corporate office about any needed corrections.

SUPPLIES NEEDED AT AN EVENING EVENT:

REGISTRATION TABLE SUGGESTIONS:

flowers
pens
black markers to write on name tags
mailing list cards
registration cards
"Registration" signs
Visa/Mastercard machine
Visa/Mastercard receipts receipt book
list of pre-registered participants
name tags
tapes for sale
 "How Many People Are in Your Bed?"
 "Ending the Fight with your Ex"
accounting sheet for tapes
petty cash and petty cash bag
promotional materials
 Choices Weekend
 The Accounting Game
 Breakthrough
 ALCD
 Advantage

FRONT OF THE ROOM

large upholstered chair for presenter
small table
pitcher of ice water with lemon
water glass
small bouquet of flowers
2 large plants
flip chart stand and pad
fat markers (black, green, red, blue)

MUSIC TABLE

stereo tape deck
speakers
extra speaker wire
Walkman w/headset and extra batteries

tape box cued

"Bed":

classical music

"I Don't Want to Sleep Alone"

"The Living Years"

"The Rose"

"Out of Africa"

"Fight":

classical music

"Out of Africa"

"All My Exes Live in Texas"

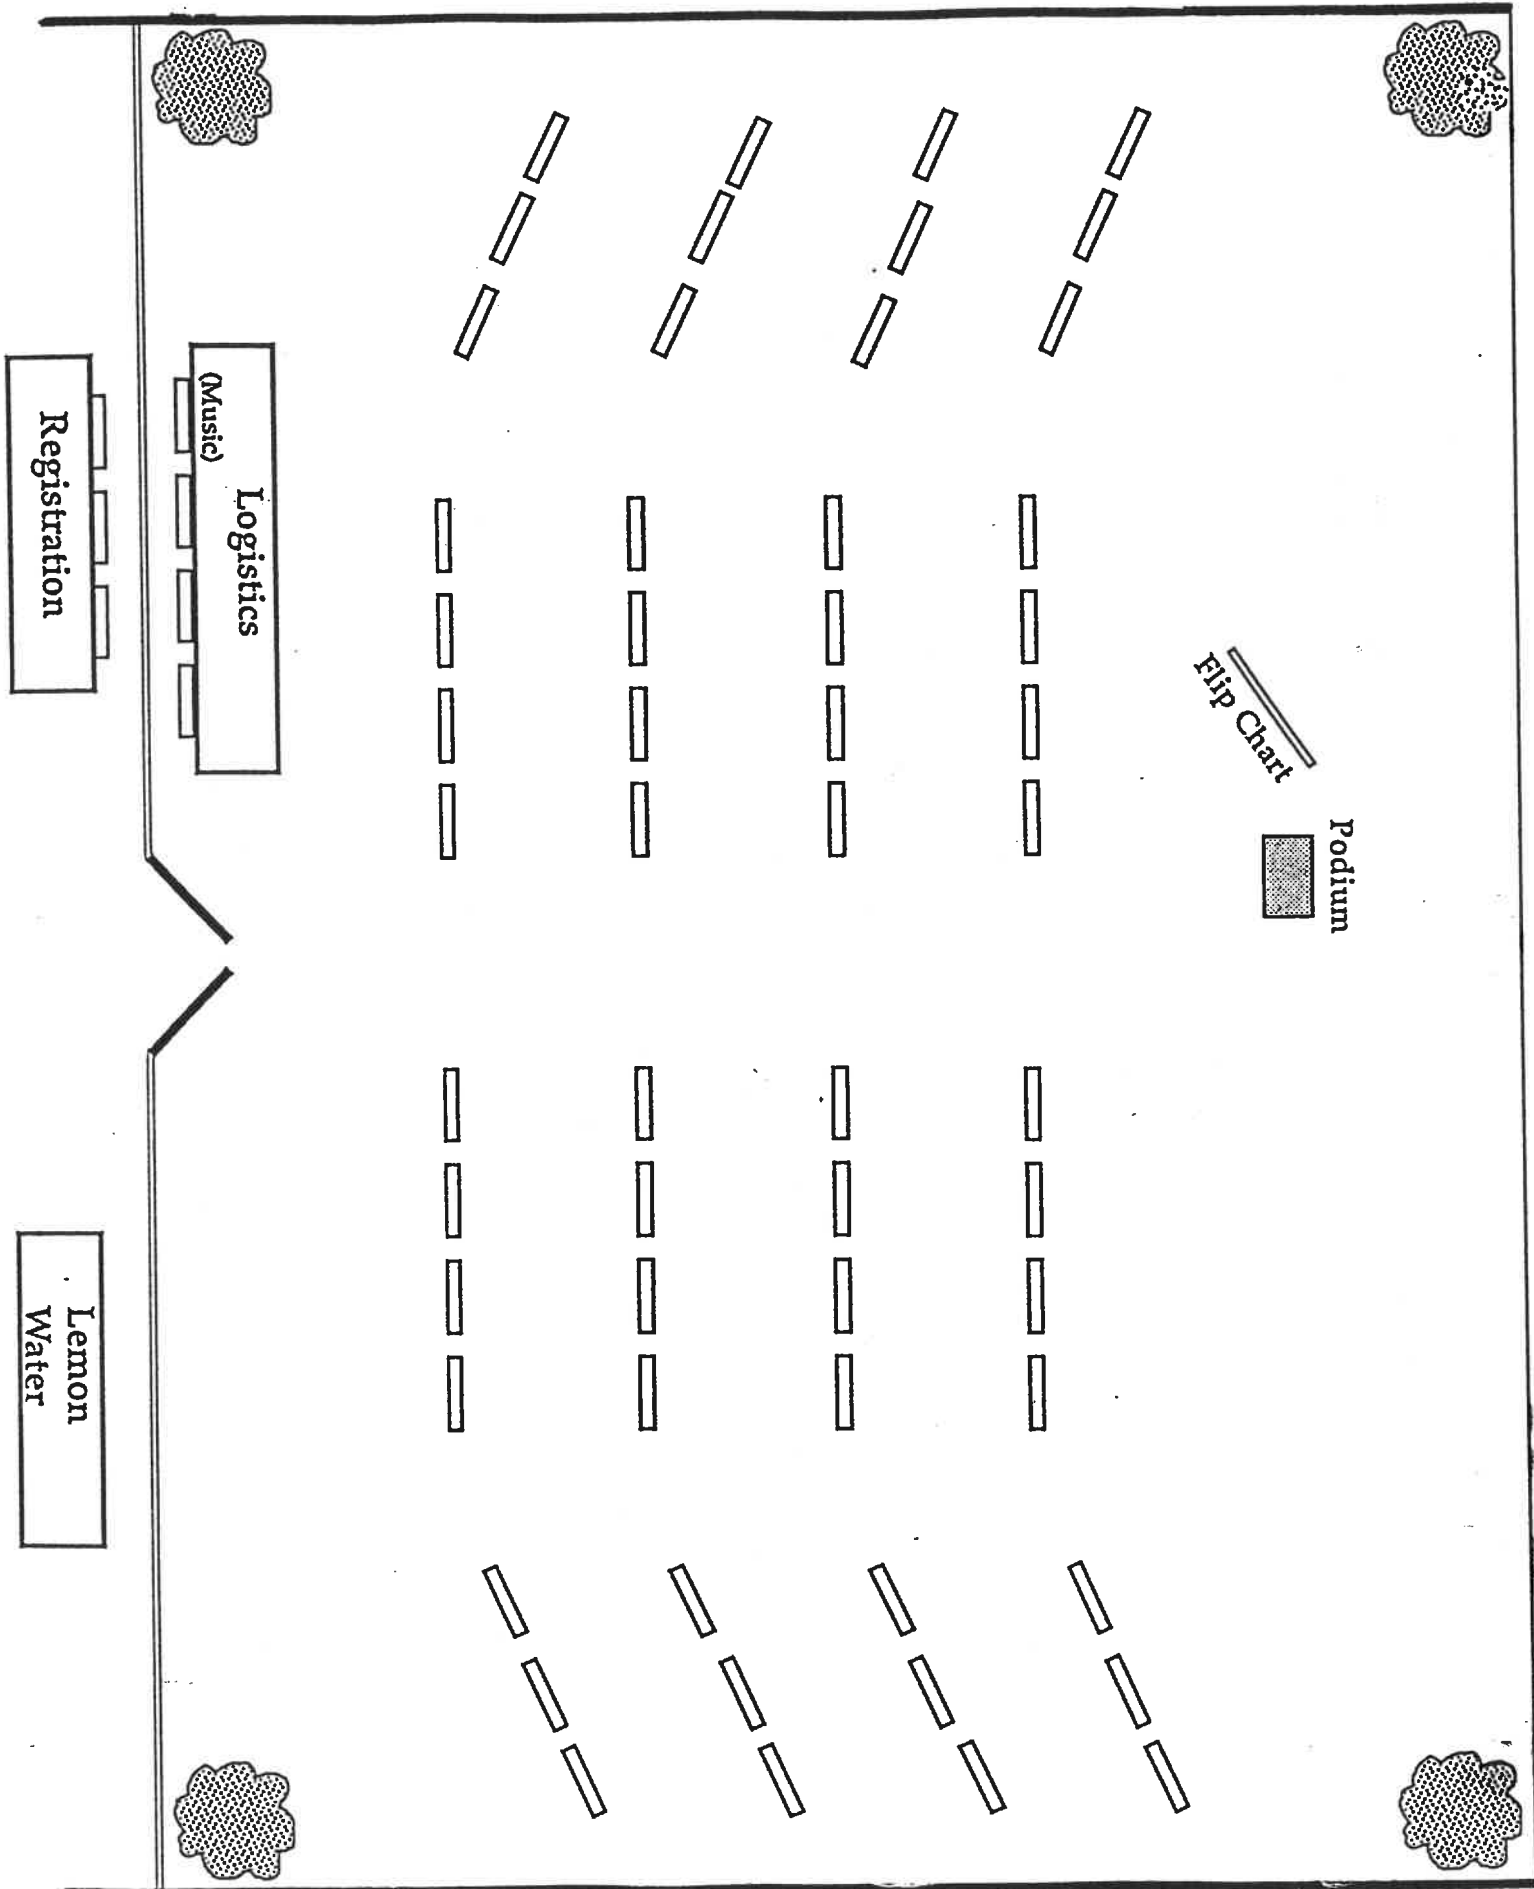

"Desperado"

"Imagine"

duct tape

masking tape

stereo connectors (depends on stereo system)

Room Set-up

Real Impact Learning
Personal Responsibility

การดำเนินงาน + ๒๐๑๓ ๒๐๑๔
การดำเนินงาน + ๒๐๑๕ ๒๐๑๖

REAL IMPACT LEARNING, INC.

Personal Responsibility, Emotional
Mastery and Success
A New Beginning

Thursday

Dec 8th

Next -
mtg.

In life, we have been taught to demonstrate our positive emotions. We have been told repeatedly and in many different ways that we are to hide our negative emotions.our full humanness. Showing negative emotions is unprofessional, represents a sign of immaturity, and is dangerous to careers. We have been taught that it is better to repress, subliminate and ignore them. If someone is outwardly angry, jealous, scared, or sad, they are usually judged as being out of control. Everyone is expected to be cool headed, logical, deliberative — or at least maintain the appearance of being cool. Yet we know that without the negative, there is no positive. We know that is true from learning how the universe works; every living form either has a part of it growing under the ground, or has a center that cannot be seen. We know that we cast a shadow; we see it every time we walk in a certain kind of light.

REAL IMPACT LEARNING, INC.

What does psychology say about repressing emotions? As a general principle, it is unhealthy. Why? When we hide or repress our emotions, we eventually end up hiding them from ourselves. When that occurs, people around us pick up that which is not said and respond to our conflict with a conflict of their own...It is difficult to stay in integrity when we show one face on the outside and another to ourselves. When this occurs, our work and family suffer. We become ill and our relationships and our results suffer from our dis-ease...

What does science say about repressing emotions? The most recent brain research says that it is impossible. Our emotions cannot really be hidden; they can only be experienced in altered forms. The brain begins to act independent from the immediate situation when it has experienced strong negative emotions in the past. That instinct served us thousands of years ago. It does not work now.

When we repress or hide our emotions, they are expressed in a distorted way.

- ❖ Instead of acknowledging my anger, I may say: "I'm not angry, you're angry."
- ❖ Or, "I'm angry, but you are causing me to be angry."

This process of distorted expression is called projection: I project my feelings or motives into you. I can also become numb or controlling. I can believe that I am making rational decisions, when in fact, I am at the mercy of those emotions that I cannot or will not experience.

Any behavior that is a result of not owning up to an emotion is called a reaction. A reaction creates Backup Behaviors. Such as defending, denying, justifying, explaining too much, blaming, pretending, avoiding, complicating and more. We become many different versions of our true self, and we do not experience our life as it is. We experience disappointment, resentment, dullness, and others when we are reacting.

REAL IMPACT LEARNING, INC.

Where does this all distortion come from? Why does it occur? It is the result of adaptation to your family system. It works the same way it does in any system, in any organization. Everyone's parents had to survive and out of this need for survival, their children learned that system. It was created out of a need to be "safe."

In order for leaders to achieve their visions and teams to create synergy within the organizational culture and context, this knowledge needs to be experienced as a natural part of their personal and business models and used as another method of research and data collection.

So what is a mentally healthy, mature, person to do? The answer seems simple enough, yet can be difficult to achieve because of our unconscious needs to see ourselves in a particular way. Very few people are willing to confront and embrace their dark or shadow self. Yet, the healthy answer is to express the emotion in a simple, honest way. This leads to Flexible Behaviors and movement toward wisdom. Acknowledge the emotion and understand that, what we feel in the moment is not the "truth," but consciousness information. In addition, the best way to use the information is objectively and neutrally like other data. As an example,

- My boss, peers, friends, lovers, criticizes me. In reaction, I am fearful, angry, and defensive.
- As neutral data, criticism does not threaten my ego. I use the information to meet my larger needs – those of my family, community, business, etc.
- I also learn how to lead more effectively.

Regarding emotions as neutral is another way of saying that the ultimate source of our feelings and thoughts is ourselves, not others, i.e. my boss criticized me, but my subsequent feelings come from me, not the other.

If we experience our emotions neutrally, our responses will change from being programmed and unconscious to being based on present time and vision based. This programming comes out of our past relationship with our families or out of ego protection. Instead of having a reactive or programmed response, we have choice. I believe this is “personal responsibility.” Personal responsibility is the ability to respond in the moment with unlimited options.

REAL IMPACT LEARNING, INC.

Therefore, in business as in our personal life, having the full range of and expressing our emotions is essential to creating trust, obtaining cooperation, learning to work together as a team, building a sense of common purpose, urgency and results.. The emotional skills — “skills” is not quite right, “self-knowledge” is closer — the emotional skills that are derived from understanding reaction and demonstrating and living from the context of personal responsibility, we call “emotional literacy.”

Emotional literacy is the ability and quality of being emotionally literate, especially the ability to “read and write” emotions. A person who is emotionally literate senses and experiences the emotional states of themselves and of others, and is able to express emotions “literally” — that is, without reaction or projection. Generally speaking, emotions in the workplace are still not valued except in the most senior positions.

Knowing where emotions come from, how to experience them neutrally, being able to transform them, and how they advance or hinder all business and personal efforts, make up the skills of Emotional Mastery. As this skill is honed and the results of its continued use are experienced, our quality of life and our desired results are enhanced. This translates to a clearer line, a critical path to success and results.

1. Emotion and the Brain features the latest research into emotional expression in the biology of the brain – and its repercussions for the body. New studies are leading scientists to consider that the brain is organized into multiple emotional processing systems, a complex web of connections that handles each emotion separately.

