

The 7-11 Game Instructions:

In this game you are all teenagers of about fourteen. You have seen one of your friends rob a 7-11 store, knocking down an elderly lady in the process. You have always respected this classmate since s/he is the class president. You have gathered together to talk to him/her.

Personalities:

- Thief
- Liberal
- Moral
- Peacemaker
- Fair

Either have them choose their part, OR have them draw the description of their role at random.

Hand out parts.

Give them a time limit.

Do the role play.

Optional: Play "Lean on Me".

Share

Talk about how belief systems affect what you do, what you experience, and what happens to you.

Optional debriefing meditation:

Instruct participants to stay in their roles for a guided meditation.

Guided Meditation:

Take that teenager forward in time 10 years. What is his/her life like? Are they in school? Do they have a job? What's their sex life like? Do they respect themselves?

Take them forward in time 20 years. What is their life like? Are they married? Divorced? Do they have any children? What do they do for work? Are they content? What is their sex life like? What are their relationships like? Do they respect themselves?

Take them forward in time 40 years. What is their life like? Do they have a relationship? Are they close with their children? Do they love their work? What is their sex life like? Are they afraid of getting old?

Take them forward in time 50 years. What is their life like? Are they alone? How is their sex life? How do they feel about death? Is there anything in their life they regret doing or not doing? Anything in their life they would do differently?

Now go back to the 14 year old and see if there is anything you want to tell him or her. Anything you want to tell him/her to do differently?

Come back here. Share.

Play In a Simple Way.