

a way to relate to the subject in terms of what is personally important to us. This means acknowledging both the emotional and spiritual impact and our deeply held values, needs and drives.

Linking emotion, spiritual relevance, and intellectual content to participant experience is the job of learning. Radical Choices' leadership programs do this through a combination of logical, emotional, and spiritual experiences, abstract concepts and physical experiences and taking action.

Any of these programs can be easily customized to your organization through a process of including organization-specific data and issues.